Senate passes property tax cut

The Associated Press

Water bills – B1
Budget puzzle – B2
Noh's vote – B4

BOISE – The state Senate late Thursday easily approved what would become the largest property tax cut in Idaho history.

"You can go home heroes to the taxpayers of your district," Senate tax-writing Chairman Jerry Thorner, R-Nampa, declared to his colleagues. "We have here a great re-election bill for all of us."

But if the Senate's 24-11 endorsement of the proposal is ratified as expected by the House today, the tax-shifting scheme of House Speaker Michael Simpson will also leave the state budget with the largest deficit — against estimated revenues — ever.

Senate action on the eve of what legislative leaders hope will be adjournment of the 1994 session came hours after Gov. Cecil Andrus hinted again that he may veto the complex tax measure because of the huge deficit it creates for the state.

The bill shifts nearly half — $66 million — of the property taxes used to finance school operations to the state treasury during the 1994-1995 school year and then the rest — $84 million — during the 1995-1996 school year. But it does not provide any source of revenue to cover the additional expense to the state. And after the 1995-1996 school year, it offers no guarantee that the state will continue reimbursing school districts for the property tax revenues they have lost.

"I hear the cry for proper tax relief, and I also hear on the national level that we want a balanced budget," said Gary Schroeder of Moscow, one of just three Republicans to oppose the bill. "We're going to spend money we don't have. That's something those liberals out in Washington do. We don't do that in Idaho."

But the bill was driven by anti-tax activist Ron Rankin's new One Percent Initiative that Simpson and others maintain would be much more disruptive. A top state education official, however, has said the initiative is preferable to the Simpson scheme because it requires cuts in other state spending to assure education support is not reduced.

Rankin has indicated that if the Simpson plan is enacted he will drop his campaign for the initiative, a modified version of a tax-capping plan voters overwhelmingly rejected in 1992.

Although modified to correct a number of technical problems, the Simpson bill raised questions about the future financial base for public schools, the impact of such a huge deficit on the state's credit rating for bonding and cash-management borrowing and the ability of local governments to continue using various creative financing schemes for their projects.

Seasonal return

A sure sign of spring according to local bird watchers is the return of turkey vultures to Twin Falls along the Snake River Canyon. The vultures began returning last week, according to Tony McNovin, who has watched the birds for several years. At least six vultures have migrated back to their spring and summer roosting grounds near the Canyon Springs Grade.

Dead fish found after waste spill

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Hundreds of fish – including rainbow and brown trout – were killed following Tuesday's wastewater spill into Rock Creek by the Amalgamated Sugar Co.

"It's a major fish kill for Rock Creek," said Fred Partridge, fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Magic Valley region. On a scale of one to 10, he rated the damage to the fishery as a seven or an eight.

The deaths were almost certainly caused by Tuesday's Amalgamated Sugar Co. spill, Partridge said. Some 9,000 to 12,000 gallons of water – heavily laced with dirt from the plant's beet-washing process – leaked from a settling pond and found its way into Rock Creek. Small amounts of pesticides and organic material also may have been spilled, officials said.

Partridge said he and two other Fish and Game employees saw 300 to 400 dead fish in five hours on Rock Creek Thursday afternoon.

"We saw dead fish of all species – including brown trout, rainbow trout, suckers and sculpin," he said.

The creek is very muddy, and Partridge admitted that he may not have seen all the casualties. Still others may have been swept downstream, he noted, "and it will be difficult to determine how many dead fish we have."

The three Fish and Game employees checked the creek from the point of the spill to Blue Lakes Boulevard. Dead fish have been reported as far downstream as the Daydream Ranch, near Addison Avenue, Partridge added.

"We also checked a short stretch upstream from the factory, but we didn't find any evidence of dead fish," he said.

Officials from Amalgamated Sugar could not be reached for comment Thursday evening.

The factory is located five to six miles up Rock Creek from its confluence with the Snake River. Partridge said most of the sediments spilled into Rock Creek were probably diluted to safe levels once the creek joined the river.

Board suspends sole teacher serving remote Three Creek School District

By Maria Stafford
Times-News writer

THREE CREEK – The ranch families of this far-flung community of desert homesteads are at odds after a divided School Board voted to suspend with pay the only teacher at the Three Creek schoolhouse.

Cathy Starr was in the middle of her second year at the eight-student school when she was suspended last week.

The community had voted 20-7 at a meeting March 21 to retain Starr, said former School Board Chairwoman Bethene Brewer of Devil Creek Ranch.

Brewer remains on the three-member board with Noy Brackett of Flat Creek Ranch and Kim Brackett of Summer Camp Ranch. The Brackets out-voted Brewer to suspend Starr.

"Apparently they don't feel they're answerable to the community," Brewer said. "I have a problem with the way it was done. It was very underhanded.

"They gave no good reasons, nothing documented, even to Starr," Brewer said. "I feel a real injustice has been done."

She resigned as chairwoman before the vote "because parents won't get out of the teacher's face," she said.

Kim Brackett said Thursday that Starr's suspension is temporary, but she would not elaborate.

"This is a confidential personnel matter," said Kim Brackett. "Anyone speaking out is breaking their confidentiality as a board member."

Starr could not be reached for comment Thursday. William Ruby, a substitute teacher from Jerome, is expected to replace Starr today.

"The board members should probably be changed," said Lola Blossom, who ranches with her husband Harvey on Cherry Creek.

She attended a community meeting in which some complaints against Starr were aired.

"They didn't have reasons – just petty little things like some kids crawling up a tree," Blossom said. "I can't remember, but it was nothing serious."

Said Brewer, "We're probably the last school in the nation where a few parents can fire a teacher."

Good news will have little impact – E1

Government officials from the president down have to worry about the drop's effect on everything from the international standing of the dollar to their political standing with the voters.

The Dow Jones industrial average seesawed wildly Thursday, leaving the well-known market barometer nearly 9 percent below its Jan. 31 peak. The continuation of the two-month turmoil prodded President Clinton into trying to reassure people "so that we don't go beyond skittishness."

"No one believes that there is a serious problem with the underlying American economy. It is healthy and it is sound," Clinton said after a bill-signing ceremony in San Diego.

Some of these corrective things will happen from time to time, but there's no reason to overreact to it," he said.

Officials at the agencies most concerned with the financial markets — the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve and the Securities and Exchange Commission — weren't saying much for the record.

But people who have occupied their chairs during earlier market crises say today's officials probably are reasonably confident that the declines will fail off and won't snowball into anything resembling a crash.

"I'm currently in a wait-and-see mood as to whether or not they (traders) will engage in the kind of panic activity in which they engaged in 1987," said David Ruder, a Northwestern University law professor who was SEC chairman 6½ years ago when the Dow plunged 500 points in one day.

But, even if panic does take hold, the government and stock and futures exchanges are in a better position to manage the markets than they were then, he said.

Hot lines now connect all the major exchanges with each other and with government regulators. And the SEC has broad authority, if necessary, to shorten trading hours and take other emergency steps short

This ice cream is truly chili

The Associated Press

FREDONIA, N.Y. — After a long, miserable winter, dairyman Scott Aldrich decided to whip up the perfect concoction to put his customers in a summer mood: vanilla ice cream with chili.

Aldrich's Beef & Ice Cream Parlor is serving up its annual April Fool's Day dessert Friday, a tradition that started 12 years ago with the truly awful flavor of beef gravy ice cream.

One year, Aldrich whipped up bacon-and-egg ice cream. Last year, it was ice cream and olives, black and green.

This year, Aldrich mixed up 20 gallons of chili-flavored vanilla, enough to serve 1,000 people.

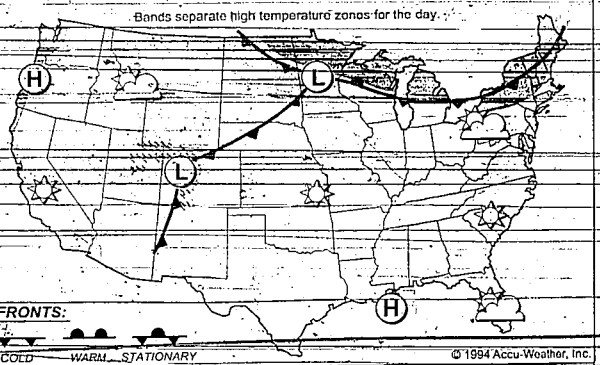

"What can I say? It's a cold, creamy bowl of chili," Aldrich said. "You taste the ice cream, you taste the chili, but instead of it being piping hot, it's cold."

Scattered showers dampen East as central states warm up

The Associated Press

Showers were scattered in the East on Thursday while sunshine warmed temperatures in the central United States.

Rain was spread from West Virginia to the mid-Atlantic coastal states. A few thunderstorms hit the coasts of North Carolina and South Carolina.

Showers in West Virginia produced a third of an inch of rain at Huntington to set a new record for monthly precipitation at 8.59 inches. The former record of 8.53 inches was set in 1917.

Strong winds from the south prevailed from the southern high Plains into the middle Mississippi Valley, joining with sunshine to boost temperatures into the 60s and 70s.

Temperatures were in the upper 30s and 40s in the Great Lakes region and the Northeast.

It was a chilly morning for the south-central and southeastern United States. Freezing temperatures were reported from northwest Texas to western Tennessee.

Morning lows were in the 60s in southern Florida. Key West reported an overnight low of 73 degrees.

U.N. takes mild stand on Korea

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council unanimously urged North Korea Thursday to allow full nuclear inspections, adopting a statement that lacked the strong sanctions threat sought by Washington.

Under a compromise worked out with China — North Korea's main ally and the main opponent to such a threat — the council instead gave only a hint of further action if Pyongyang continues to refuse to cooperate.

North Korea quickly repudiated the statement, called for negotiations with the United States and said the Pyongyang government would not permit further inspections.

"We are strongly against this" statement, North Korean Ambassador Pak Gil Yon told reporters. "The issuing even of a statement will not help the solution of the problem."

"We have nothing more to show the International Atomic Energy (Agency) inspectors at this time," he added.

Earlier, the North's official news agency quoted an unnamed Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying that his country might be willing to return to negotiations under some conditions, including a restart to U.S.-North Korean talks.

North Korea denies that it is developing nuclear weapons but has warned of war if it is pushed too far, and its refusal to allow nuclear inspections of some sites has raise suspicions.

North Korea agreed in February to allow U.N. inspections of seven nuclear sites. But during the U.N. inspections, North Korea blocked access to a key facility suspected of reprocessing plutonium, which can be used to make nuclear weapons.

To raise pressure on Pyongyang, the United States had sought a legally binding Security Council resolution, hinting at sanctions and further council action if the North does not cooperate.

China opposed a resolution and sought a weaker, non-binding statement that made no threats.

Under their compromise, the statement said that the council will actively study the situation and decide "that further Security Council consideration will take place if necessary in order to achieve full implementation" of nuclear accords between North Korea and the IAEA.

A White House official said the administration was "very pleased" with the statement, because it provided a way for China to join the U.N. action. He spoke on condition of anonymity from southern California, where President Clinton is vacationing.

The diplomat said the United States was prepared to accept the statement because the substance was very similar to its ideas and council unanimity was vital.

U.S. diplomats said it was important that all 15 council members be united in urging North Korea to accept inspections. China, a permanent member with veto power, had been expected to abstain from the resolution.

A rule, established after the crash, limits high-volume computerized trades when the market declines 50 points and has been helping to keep volatility in check.

Sources at the SEC, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the agency's staff has been in constant contact with other agencies, large brokerage firms and the stock exchanges to make sure no problems developed and that automated trading systems were operating smoothly.

"Market observers have represented to me that a correction has taken, or is taking place and it is occurring in a stable and orderly fashion," said a current SEC commissioner, Richard Roberts.

"Of course those investors who were prepared to ride out the bumps and bruises in the short term, historically have profited a great deal in the long term," he added.

Meanwhile, U.S. stock declines have spilled over into foreign markets and the value of the dollar has fallen. The dollar has sunk below 103 yen and may approach the 101-yen level that last August prompted U.S. authorities to launch a massive dollar-buying round to prop it up.

"There might be some discussions about that but so far things aren't that unsettled," said a former senior Treasury Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Many in the financial markets trace the market's current problems to the Federal Reserve's decision on Feb. 4 to start nudging short-term interest rates higher.

But a former Federal Reserve Board member now with the Mortgage Bankers Association of America said neither the increase in interest rates nor the market's response should be particularly surprising.

Economic growth shot up to a sizzling level in the fourth quarter of last year — 7 percent at an annual rate — and it's only natural that interest rates headed higher in response, said economist Lyle Gramley.

That in turn makes fixed-income securities more attractive and stocks less attractive.

Senate

Without the guarantee that the state would continue covering the lost property tax receipts beyond the 1995-1996 school year, school districts could lose as much as $1 billion over the following five years that they would otherwise have had.

But while opponents called the plan irresponsible for not identifying the specific source of state cash to pay for the shift, its supporters maintained it was the only way to secure property tax relief and force what Simpson hopes will be a reduction in other government spending.

"The only way we're going to give people in this state property tax relief is give them the relief and then come back here and make the policy decisions to fund it," Senate President Pro Tem Jerry Twiggs said.

Andrus has criticized several times any approach that mirrors the deficit spending the federal government has been universally criticized for, and he did it again Thursday.

"I'm not going to let that happen to the state of Idaho," he told reporters. "We will have a balanced budget. We will not have a deficit budget coming out of any legislative session."

Simpson contends natural economic growth will cover the increased demand on the state treasury. But that would require a revenue growth rate higher than at any time in the past 10 years.

And the Legislature has already spent all the money economists expect the state's tax structure to raise during the tax shift's first year. In fact, some budget writers supporting Simpson's tax-shifting scheme feared running the budget into the red so much on Thursday that they voted to finance a $100,000 juvenile justice study with money from the budget reserve account to avoid going even $5,000 over the estimate of available revenue.

"We've done the easy part, but we're doing only half the job," Democratic Sen. Denny Davis of Coeur d'Alene said. "We're not telling the voters ... where the money's coming from."

Public schools gain federal support after 5 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Half a decade after states began trying to improve their public schools, they finally have some financial support from the federal government.

President Clinton signed the Goals 2000 Educate America Act into law Thursday and by July 1, the first $105 million will begin flowing to states that apply for it.

"This is the beginning. It is the foundation. Today we can say America is serious about education," Clinton said just before signing the bill on the outdoor basketball court of a San Diego elementary school.

The law requires participating states to develop — but not implement — education reform plans that set voluntary standards on curriculum, student performance and on the resources, materials and teacher preparation necessary to ensure that all children have an opportunity to learn.

The bill authorizes $647-million this year for education reforms that move toward that goal, including $400 million in grants to states and local school agencies.

The Education Department promises a "quick and simple application" process, "It's really inconceivable that any state that applies won't get funds," said MIKE Cohen, a senior adviser to Education Secretary Richard Riley.

AP photo

Among the things to be examined: how the states plan on getting the money to local school districts and individual schools.

States will have two years to complete their reform plans. "If we're convinced it's aimed at challenging standards for all students, if the plan is really comprehensive and it's a promising one, we'll continue to provide funding," he said. They also will be allowed to apply for waivers from federal regulations.

Cohen said virtually every state already has begun to search for ways to invigorate a public education system judged by many to be failing. American students consistently score behind their European and Japanese counterparts in math and science.

"Certainly you didn't want states sitting down and waiting for the bill to pass," he said.

The impetus for the states was the 1989 education summit, where then-President Bush and the nation's governors adopted six national education goals that would create benchmarks for what children should be able to do in English, math, science and other subjects. A national council will be created to review the standards and make sure they are rigorous.

Education has been traditionally left to the states and until the summit there had been no formal attempt to establish federal academic guidelines. Thus, a fourth-grade curriculum might vary dramatically from state to state, even city to city within a state.

During debate on Capitol Hill, several Republicans argued that Goals 2000 was in essence creating a national curriculum. But Democrats and moderate Republicans stressed the standards were all voluntary.

The Council of Chief State School Officers has been working with states for more than a year to prepare them for Goals 2000.

Executive director Gordon Ambach said the council is acting as a clearinghouse for state education reform plans. "We have been collecting information on exactly what the states have been doing up to this point," he said. "We regularly meet and have our persons exchange good practices."

States are very anxious to share their ideas, he said. "They don't want to reinvent the wheel. They don't have the time and they don't have the inclination to duplicate efforts."

Ambach said states need to reach out to all elements of the community in developing a reform plan.

Georgia, for example, has called on business, government and local school leaders to come up with a series of actions to improve its public schools.

The state also has provided $4 million in funds for 13 "Lighthouse School Districts" designed to help children meet "world-class achievement standards" through community involvement, extensive use of technology and staff development.

Franklin Shumake, assistant state school superintendent for school improvement, said Georgia will use its first funds under Goals 2000 to hold regional meetings on staff development and on the state's improvement plan. Among the questions to be addressed:

One group that promises not to be left out of the process is parents.

"We not only are going to urge and encourage our people to be involved, we are going to push them," said Kathryn Whitfill, president of the National PTA.

U.S. turns up heat on Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration took the first step Thursday toward establishing a "hit list" of countries judged to have erected the most harmful trade barriers to American products as it continued to turn up the pressure on Japan.

The administration released a 281-page report in which it cited 35 countries and four trading blocs for alleged unfair trading practices.

This report, known as the "National Trade Estimate Report on Foreign Trade Barriers" will serve as the basis for targeting a much smaller list of nations by Sept. 30 for possible trade sanctions if they do not agree to remove the offending barriers.

While nations from Argentina to Australia were cited in the report, administration officials left no doubt that the primary focus was on Japan.

The section of the report covering Japan took up 44 pages, an increase of 57 percent over last year. And the report's harshest comments were reserved for Japan, which it said had import barriers that far exceeded those of other major industrial countries and placed "an unacceptable burden on the global trading system."

Ira Shapiro, general counsel for the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, said this year's report showed significant progress had been made globally in reducing barriers, especially with the December completion by 117 nations of negotiations on a new global trade pact that would cut tariffs and remove other barriers to goods and services.

Still, the United States found plenty to complain about in the report, which the executive branch has been required by Congress to publish for the past nine years.

This year's report took on added significance when President Clinton on March 9 issued an executive order reviving a lapsed provision of trade law known as Super 301. This provision is deeply resented by foreign governments who see it as a form of unilateral bullying on the part of the United States, forcing governments to make trade concessions.

Cable companies wait for new FCC rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six weeks before the Federal Communications Commission's new cable price rules take effect, cable operators are still waiting for the forms necessary to calculate new rates.

The FCC released new rules Wednesday designed to cut cable rates an average of 7 percent, but not the formula that cable companies need to calculate their new rates.

Even with the formula in hand, operators said, new rates won't be figured out for weeks.

"Once they are, there's no guarantee that every cable subscriber's monthly bill will be reduced. In fact, some could go up.

That's because the new rate structure intended to reduce cable bills is only one of two changes to take effect on May 15.

The other: A yearlong rate freeze will be lifted and cable companies will be able, for the first time in a year to raise rates to account for inflation and increases in business costs. They also would have to cut their rates to reflect any decreases in those costs.

How much any of these possible increases may eat into rate reductions for consumers is a wild card that will vary by system and by subscriber, cable executives and FCC officials said.

Meantime, cable companies are waiting for the paperwork from the FCC, a stack of documents and forms more than 500 pages long.

FCC spokeswoman Susan Sallet said the Office of Management and Budget, the government's paperwork police, could approve release of the forms as early as Friday.

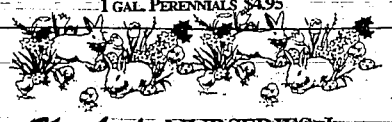

According to the FCC's own estimate, the three new forms most operators are likely to use to calculate new rates will take 40 hours — a standard work week — to complete. A spreadsheet version on computer disc should take only 10 hours.

The FCC ordered the 7 percent reduction in February following a rate change intended to cut rates by an average of 10 percent last year.

The new formula is based on a number of variables, including the average income of people in the area served and whether the system is affiliated with a large cable company.

Study says gene therapy lowers cholesterol

NEW YORK (AP) — Her cholesterol was so high that she had a heart attack at age 16.

Twelve years later, researchers set out to treat her by implanting genes in her liver.

Now, the first published study of this use of gene therapy in humans says the woman's cholesterol levels have fallen dramatically, bolstering hopes for what some researchers see as a coming revolution in medicine.

The woman's cholesterol has remained lower since the treatment in 1992, said Dr. James Wilson, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Institute for Human Gene Therapy.

Though she still has dangerously high cholesterol, a heart specialist said the therapy probably will prolong her life, perhaps by years.

"I feel much better in the sense that I can do more physical activities now, such as skiing and dancing. I was limited before," the 30-year-old seamstress and part-time bank teller from Quebec City said Thursday.

The woman, who insisted on anonymity, has a severe form of a disease called familial hypercholesterolemia, in which the liver lacks the gene to produce a normally functioning protein that removes cholesterol from the blood. About one in a million people don't have the gene.

Social Security proposes radical change to speed disability claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — After years of reports that disabled Americans are dying, attempting suicide or losing their homes while waiting for disability benefits, Social Security took the first steps Thursday to radically revamp and speed up the process.

A team of agency employees and state disability experts drafted the proposal to redesign, for the first time since the 1950s, the way Social Security decides millions of applications for benefits.

Their blueprint, presented to Social Security Commissioner Shirley S. Chater, would cut the number of days an application for benefits is shuffled from one in box to another and allow the person claiming disability to actually meet, face-to-face, the worker who decides the case.

The proposal eliminates two of the four levels of appeal now available to applicants whose claims are denied on the first round. But each applicant is assigned a Social Security employee who will steer the claim through a tricky maze of forms, laws and requests for medical evidence.

The proposed changes are sure to prompt questions about due process protections and the new services promised to applicants by an agency that slashed its work force by a fifth in the 1980s and now finds itself unable to cope with a tidal wave of claims for benefits.

Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, has already announced a hearing to examine the proposal and those issues.

Social Security's task force spent five months on its proposal, criss-crossing the country to visit field offices and interview thousands of agency workers, advocates, physicians, attorneys and disabled Americans.

The team found a system that is failing sick and injured people at a time when they most need an income and federal health insurance.

"Our current antiquated disability process has not changed in any important way since the beginning of the program in the 1950s, and we believe that the process is now broken and must be rebuilt," Chater said.

Social Security runs two disability programs: disability insurance for workers who become sick or injured, and Supplemental Security Income for indigent children and adults. Recipients qualify for either Medicare or Medicaid.

More than 5 million people collect disability benefits and 700,000 more have applications pending.

It takes Social Security more than three months to decide a claim, and 16 to 26 employees are involved. The person who makes the final decision seldom sees the applicant.

If a claim is rejected and appealed to an administrative law judge, the process takes over a year and ultimately involves 45 employees before a single check is written.

Under the plan to redesign the system, the agency would make a decision within 40 days and only seven or eight employees would touch the file. An appeal would be decided within five months and the total process would involve no more than 14 employees.

Applicants for benefits would deal almost exclusively with a single employee — a disability claims manager — responsible for making the initial decision to accept or deny the claim. They would also be allowed a face-to-face meeting with that person if the claim is about to be denied.

About 5th of workers 'underpaid'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost one-fifth of America's full-time workers receive what the government considers low pay, the Census Bureau says.

A Census study found 18 percent of year-round, full-time workers earning less than $13,091 a year in 1992. That's up from just 12 percent classified as earning low pay in 1979.

"The shift toward low levels of earnings has had a significant effect on young workers. For both the 18-to-24 and 24-to-34 age groups, the proportion ... with low earnings roughly doubled between 1979 and 1992," said Jack McNeil, a Census analyst.

Women are more likely to have low earnings than men, and low earners tend to have less education than other workers, the bureau noted.

The low-earning threshold of $13,091 a year is about 8 percent below the poverty level for a four-person family. It differs from the poverty level because it uses a different system to measure the changes in consumer prices over time.

For men the share earning low pay grew from 7.7 percent in 1979 to 14.1 percent in 1992, while for women it increased from 20.4 percent to 23.6 percent.

The 18-to-24 age group saw a low-earnings increase from 22.9 percent to 47.1 percent. For those age 25 to 34 the increase was from 8.8 percent to 18.4 percent.

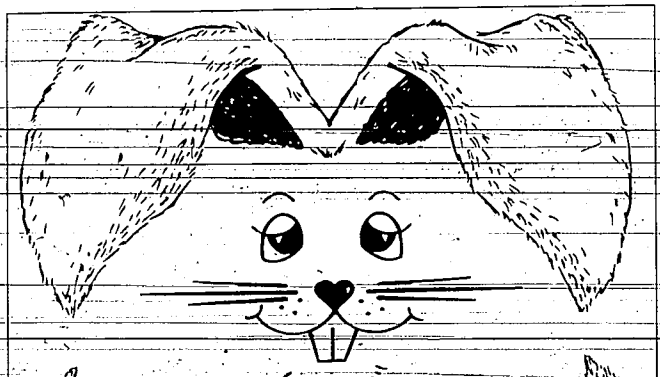

Low income was earned by 9.9 percent of people aged 35 to 54 in 1979 and 13.3 percent in 1992. And 16.5 percent of those aged 55 to 64 earned low income, up from 12.0 percent.

Navy panel suggests expulsion

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A Navy panel Thursday recommended the expulsion of 29 midshipmen involved in the largest cheating scandal in the 149-year history of the U.S. Naval Academy.

The Honor Review Board said 42 other midshipmen should be disciplined for honor code violations. It cleared 35 midshipmen of cheating on an electrical engineering examination in December 1992.

As many as 133 midshipmen were implicated in the cheating scandal. The others have either resigned, were found innocent or were disciplined. The final decision in all the cases will be made by the Secretary of the Navy.

In cases where there was a violation, the board considered issues such as degree of involvement and extenuating circumstances in deciding whether a midshipmen should be expelled or allowed to graduate with their class in May.

Earlier reviews found that midshipmen had access to a copy of the examination that was stolen and circulated in Bancroft Hall, the dormitory that houses more than 4,000 midshipmen.

The scandal has embroiled the academy in a yearlong review of the honor code and why no one reported that a copy of the examination was being circulated. The academy's honor code says midshipmen will not lie, cheat or steal.

The original investigation at the academy found that 28 midshipmen might have had prior knowledge of the examination. After hearings before honor boards made up of midshipmen and a review by top academy officials, 22 were cleared of involvement and six were recommended to be expelled in April 1993.

The inquiry was reopened and the inspector general was brought in last June after the midshipmen recommended for dismissal complained they were being made scapegoats and that many other midshipmen were involved.

The Navy inspector general's report said the investigation revealed that many midshipmen believe the honor code "is an ideal that simply could not be applied to many of the problems that arise in daily life" at the academy.

Rear Adm. Thomas Lynch, the superintendent, has acknowledged that the academy did not place enough emphasis on the importance of the honor code.

Florida restriction on public nudity dies

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Sunny Florida appears safe for now as a paradise for those who prefer their nature au naturel.

A House committee rejected a bill Wednesday to toughen the state's public nudity law, even after the measure was, ah, stripped-down to avoid interfering with nudists camps, nude beaches and topless bars.

The amended version, which failed on a 7-7 tie, would have barred public nudity "except in any place provided or set apart for that purpose."

Penalize state senators who broke meeting law

You'd think politicians who pass laws would have the good sense to obey them. When they don't, they should be held accountable.

This week the state Senate's Local Government and Taxation Committee held a closed-door meeting to smooth out a difficult tax-relief bill. The ensuing tempest probably didn't mean much to average citizens, but the issue is important.

A key principle of representative government is that the public's business should be conducted where the public can see it.

Idaho's Open Meetings Law says, "All meetings of any standing, special or select committee of either house of the legislature of the state of Idaho shall be open to the public at all times."

That's pretty clear. After an initial review of the episode, Attorney General Larry EchoHawk reached the obvious conclusion that the meeting probably was illegal.

Not only illegal, but wrong. The senators, led by Senate President Pro Tem Jerry Twiggs of Blackfoot, were huddling to decide on a tax law that would affect every Idaho property owner. Their decision could affect the education of every Idaho child.

So what did those senators say that they didn't want Idaho taxpayers to hear?

(The senators' offense was compounded by the foolishness of the bill they were working on. It grants $127 million in property-tax relief, but it neither replaces the lost revenue nor cuts spending. It's reckless grandstanding, but that's another issue.)

Fortunately, something can be done. The law allows a $150 penalty for the first violation and $300 for a repeat offense. Enforcing it is EchoHawk's job, and he should do so.

All of Idaho's city councils, county commissions and small-town school boards are expected to obey the open-meetings law, under threat of fines. Many of those people don't even get paid for their service.

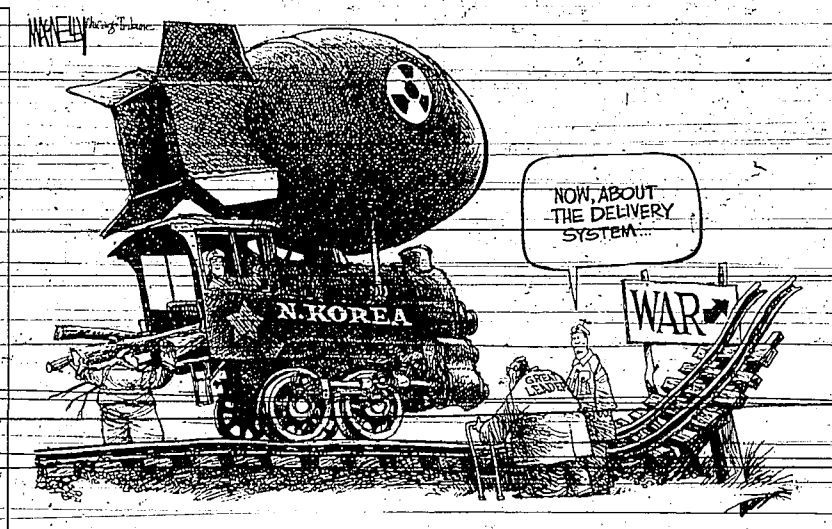

If state legislators don't respect the law and obey it, why should anyone else?

EchoHawk should look into Tuesday's meeting further. If he confirms that it was illegal, as seems likely, he should pursue fines against all those responsible.

Are judges infallible?

One question that has always puzzled me is, are judges that are selected to serve on state and federal courts automatically issued halos and wings upon being appointed and sworn in, or do they still put their trousers on one leg at a time as I do?

Dilettantes' show was great

To the young and to the somewhat older, it is hats off. What a show!

Magic Valley is blessed with an amazing group of talented people in the Dilettantes' production of "Annie." The director, with his singing and dancing associates, made all look plenty professional.

There are several morals to the story: (1) Lying to get $50,000 can get some people in a lot of trouble; (2) presidents can get much done by listening to their wise cabinet members; (3) if we wait long enough, justice will prevail; (4) wish all orphans could sing and dance like the ones on 59th Street.

Pleased and impressed,

Questions remain over death

It will be two years since my grandson, Jay Barrutia, was killed on Highway 26 east of Shoshone – April 26, 1992.

My family and I are still getting calls from all over the valley. To answer some of the questions, Jay had no broken bones or bruises; the watch that was found near the scene is not Jay's; there was no hit-and-run truck involved as our Lincoln County sheriff put in The Times-News on May 20, 1992.

The person or persons that killed Jay are still out there to do it again to someone else.

Please, if anyone has any information, let us know – even if you think it's not important. Our phone numbers are: Barrutia, 886-2750, or Depew, 886-7532. We both have answering machines in case we are not at home.

The Jay Barrutia Investigation Account is still open at the First Security Bank in Shoshone if anyone would like to help.

School issue needs more time

As parents, our responsibility is to choose what is best for our children.

The school's board of trustees has the responsibility to provide workable solutions to the educational needs of our children. This is not easy to do. There will always be ongoing debates about education methods.

About 18 years ago when Mr. Ragland was the superintendent of schools, it was proposed to place all kindergarten students in Washington School with a fence along Five Points. After many comments, the board made the decision to keep families and neighborhoods together. Kindergarten students would attend nearest their homes. (Washington was torn down and Sawtooth was built).

We have again been presented with a similar option (No. 3). The School Board will made a decision April 19. Three and a half weeks seems a short time to make a decision that will affect so many families.

A kindergarten center might be a good addition only if it has the support of the parents. The question is whether the educational benefits of one far outweigh the breaking up of families?

If not, then let's work together to keep our children together in school with the good teachers they have.

This family goes private

I'm wrong. At the last school board meeting, the superintendent presented the option of a kindergarten center or redefining the boundary lines. The School Board explained how busing would not be a problem. It explained how it is concerned about the teacher/pupil ratio. It explained that the kindergarten center would not be lacking funds.

I'm sending my child to a private kindergarten.

Candidate talks of growth

In response to your recent editorial, "Genie of growth won't go back in the bottle":

On Feb. 14, I came to Twin Falls to announce my candidacy for governor. Essentially, what I said follows:

Education, jobs, crime, affordable housing and property taxes, our environment – all are issues that need to be addressed in our state, and all are impacted by Idaho's greatest issue: Growth! We need to prepare for tomorrow instead of being trapped by today. From January 1990 to November 1994, we will have seen the population of another Boise move to Idaho. In the next five years, we can expect two more new Boises in Idaho.

What is this growth going to do to our way of life? Our schools? Which neighborhoods will be torn down to make way for more traffic? Who will pay for the extra streets and sewers? As property values and taxes climb, some Idaho folks aren't going to be able to afford to live here. What happens to our great outdoors, our hunting and fishing? And the list goes on.

City councils and county commissioners are at the Legislature asking for help. Residents are filing lawsuits against developers. Taxes and crime rates are climbing. There is too little water and too many demands. We need to use some common sense to find some common ground. Because if Portland or Seattle have one more drive-by shooting or if California's Richter Scale hits seven, Idaho's population could double.

Idaho is a place where your neighbor is more than a number on the house next door. Today and every day for the next four years, I intend to reach out to native and newcomer alike. I ask the newcomer to join me in helping to keep this state from becoming what you left. I want your help. As governor, I intend to hold town hall meetings all across Idaho, focusing on our future, asking for the help and advice of all. I will use my 13 years of experience as a state senator to build consensus for the legislative changes needed to preserve our way of life. We need to hold on to all that is good in Idaho today while we prepare for the tomorrow that is already here. All of us, for ourselves, for our children, must work together to keep Idaho – Idaho!

Because if we don't, it will be gone before we know it. The impact of growth is the greatest issue facing the next governor of Idaho.

RON BEITELSPACHER

'They're all conservatives'

Conservative, by definition, means "opposed to change, resistant to change, traditional, cautious." I don't care if you call them Democrats or Republicans, liberals or conservatives, left- or right-winged, they are all conservatives to me. Government on the national level desperately needs to change. It knows it but it doesn't have a clue how to do it because it is so stuck in the same mind set.

Take health care. This is a capitalistic society, so you don't change things by socializing them. If the doctors are charging too much, you turn the nurse practitioners lose. Give the doctor some competition. Why go to all these specialists for the basics?

If the insurance companies are gouging everybody too much, set it up like car insurance. If you have a poor record, you pay more. If you are old, overweight, don't exercise and smoke, you pay more. That way the young, healthy person that is lower on the wage scale can afford insurance for himself and his family. Let the fat and lazy that don't want to exercise and clean up their diet pay for their own bypass surgeries.

If the pharmaceutical companies are overcharging, give them some competition. If a medicine they manufacture comes under general use, take away their patent – especially if the drug was developed at university research facilities with taxpayers' money. This has happened too often. Also, let foreign companies into the market. Most common drugs that reputable European companies manufacture sell for a lot less money.

We don't have a health care problem. We have a nutrition problem. We eat too much fat and not enough fiber. We eat too much sugar and not enough complex carbohydrates. The government needs to emphasize this by first changing the school lunch program.

Actually this is the true conservative and capitalistic approach to the problem because it limits government involvement and reduces our tax burden. The bureaucratic ancients that run this country from Washington, D.C., have totally lost it as far as I am concerned.

Keep Minidoka school officials

So what if 500 people signed the school petitions that were passed around in Minidoka County? Five-hundred signatures represents a minuscule percentage of the voters in this county. Yes, I signed too; only to find that I had fallen for the oldest ruse around – that of believing the deceptive gossip and misinformation that was being promulgated. How many others signed because of what they were told without getting validated facts? When I did seek out the truth, I found nothing more than a handful of patrons with personal vendettas and others with complaints that anyone with an ounce of sense could have taken care of.

What we have here is a minority sounding as if it is the majority. I am getting rather impatient with those that are taking up the time of the school board and the administration with their petty grievances and filing lawsuits against the school district. Is this a violation of my civil rights that my tax monies have to be spent in defending harassment and lawsuits, rather than the education of the students in this county? Is it a violation of my civil rights that this small group of patrons can use my tax monies to initiate redistricting or recall? Is it also a violation of my civil rights when this small group of patrons say in the media that it represents the patrons of this school district? It doesn't represent me, it never did and it never will!

We have wonderful modern school buildings and dedicated teachers who go the extra mile in educating our children. If we don't aim our efforts in the right direction, the whole system could deteriorate. Do we want school board members who let patrons run their business? Do we want administrators who draw nice salaries but sit at their desks and twiddle their fingers? I think not!

Our school district is a $16 million business. I want qualified trustees with business savvy. I want administrators who can prioritize the funds. These people are in place in our school district now. I hope the "thinking people" of this district are letting the school leadership know that they appreciate what they are doing.

Yes, we have freedom of speech, but sometimes that freedom is terribly abused when it comes from the mouths of tactless and demoralizing people.

Democrats have a chance

Recently, Republican County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman declared the Democrats' chances in Twin Falls County in 1994 to be "about 99.99 percent unreal." Given the current state of affairs here, I feel one must question the validity of that statement.

If Twin Falls County is such a rock-solid Republican area as Mr. Hempleman would have you believe, why is it GOP victories against tepid – or even nonexistent – Democratic opposition prove time and time again to be less than spectacular?

In 1992, Sen. Dirk Kempthorne beat Richard Stallings' lackluster campaign in Twin Falls, but only by a very slim margin. The GOP nominee for sheriff lost to an independent. Even the great hated Bill Clinton was competitive in Buhl and parts of Twin Falls City and actually won several precincts in the county. In a county in which a monolithic GOP organization is pitted against a handful of Democratic activists election after election, one would expect better results from the former.

Twin Falls County isn't the hard-right conservative area we're led to believe. People throughout the Magic Valley share a strong commitment to human rights, environmental balance and free enterprise, all central facets of the Democratic platform. Democrats reject the hateful posturing of the Idaho Citizens Alliance and other like-minded reactionary groups and believe our government should pay less attention to special interests and more attention to our children and our agricultural community. It is my firm belief residents of Twin Falls County feel the same. The Democratic challenge in 1994 is organization and getting the message out. Without it, we're nothing; decades of futility prove it.

I'm encouraged by the candidacies of Democrats Dennis Maughan and Dave Bailey for county commissioner, and I wish them the best of luck as the campaign progresses. I hope they take their candidacies seriously and hit the pavement, address the issues, talk straight with people and speak from the heart. A little honesty and straight talk clears up a lot of misconceptions. Twin Falls can be a competitive two-party county in a very short period of time, and with hard work and a good organization, I'd say the chances of a Democratic renaissance are about 99.99 percent real.

Healthy Yeltsin packs agenda to dispel rumors

In fact, he's in such good shape he just might run for re-election in 1996.

That's the way Yeltsin spokesman Vyacheslav Kostikov put it Thursday, trying to quash rumors about the president by rattling off his lengthy political agenda and packed scheduled.

It was the first news briefing since Yeltsin returned from a two-week Black Sea vacation Sunday. The president's absence sparked speculation he was gravely ill or about to be toppled.

Kostikov said the rumors were meant "to test the level of stability in our society and the degree of the president's political self-control."

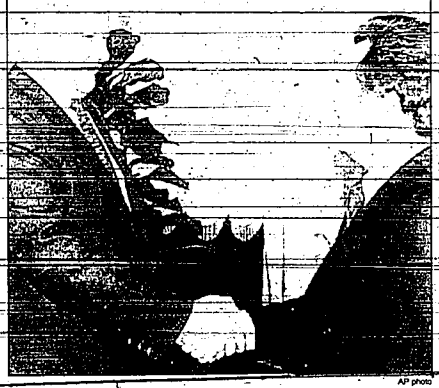

"The result was positive," he added. "The president did not interrupt his vacation. A year ago, he would have definitely boarded a plane and returned to Moscow."

Kostikov described a take-charge Yeltsin, whose main goal now is to get rival factions in Parliament to sign a civic accord. It would keep political rivals negotiating and avoid the kind of violent standoff that occurred last fall when Yeltsin disbanded the old parliament and its supporters took up arms against him.

He's also reconsidering Russia's stand on joining NATO's Partnership for Peace program.

Still, rumors linger that an upcoming visit to Spain might also include a visit to the doctor.

Yeltsin will make a state visit to Spain on April 11-13, meet leaders of the Commonwealth of Independent States two days later in Moscow, and also find time for a meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who is arriving in Moscow this week.

Kostikov said Yeltsin would visit Barcelona for a day, fueling more speculation that the 63-year-old president might have health problems.

Yeltsin underwent surgery in Barcelona in 1990 for a slipped disk and Barcelona doctors treated him a year later in Moscow for nerve inflammation in his lower spine.

The director of The Hospital de Barcelona, Carles Humet, told the Europa Press news agency this week that Yeltsin had asked to see some of his Spanish doctors during his visit, but not in a friendly basis, not for a medical checkup.

"He hasn't asked for one and we don't think it's necessary," Humet said.

Kostikov said there would be no checkups.

"Boris Yeltsin is going to Barcelona not for medical treatment, but for getting acquainted with the economic achievements of that highly developed city," he said.

In fact, Kostikov raised the possibility that Yeltsin might run again when his term expires in 1996. Yeltsin has not made it clear whether he would seek another term.

"The political sea is still quite rough, and I do not think Boris Nikolayevich would leave the helm of the Russian ship unless he has sufficient reason to think Russia is in reliable hands," Kostikov said.

He chided reporters for bringing the subject up.

"Russia needs a political breather, a kind of moratorium on political passions," Kostikov said.

Also on Yeltsin's busy agenda are meetings with government leaders about the economy, with regional leaders on regional policy, and with journalists about a new volume of memoirs he is about to publish.

State of emergency declared in Zulu region

De Klerk ordered troops to quell political violence in the Zulu-dominated Natal Province and the KwaZulu homeland ruled by the Zulu nationalists' leader, Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

He said Buthelezi would remain as head of KwaZulu's government but that the South African army would ensure free campaigning and voting in the homeland and surrounding Natal.

Fire at nuclear center injures 6

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France — An explosion and fire at a reactor in a nuclear research center Thursday injured six workers and left two missing, firefighters said.

A nuclear safety official said that initial inspections of the Cadarache nuclear research center detected no radioactive leaks, but that the injured workers were being checked for contamination.

Cause of the explosion was not immediately known.

The blast ripped through a tank holding slightly radioactive sodium as workers were cleaning it, causing the concrete structure to collapse. The injuries were caused by the falling concrete.

Talks mark massacre anniversary

CAIRO, Egypt — A month after the massacre in Hebron, the PLO and Israel sat down again Thursday to negotiate Palestinian self-rule after Israel reversed itself and accepted international observers on occupied lands.

The talks began immediately after the two sides agreed to send 160 observers armed with pistols to Hebron and pledged to speed up the Israeli army's pullout, which was supposed to have begun in December.

The PLO suspended the talks after a Jewish settler killed 30 Palestinians praying at a Hebron mosque on Feb. 25. The massacre provoked riots throughout the territories and prompted Palestinian demands for international protection.

Officials unsatisfied with 3-day truce

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The IRA's announcement of a brief truce next week is not enough to put Northern Ireland on the road to peace, Prime Minister John Major said Thursday.

"A three-day cease-fire is not going to change the future of Northern Ireland. They must stop the violence permanently and then in due course enter the constitutional talks," Major said while visiting Belfast.

Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds also expressed disappointment with the short cease-fire, which is to begin at midnight Tuesday and is the IRA's first in 19 years apart from its annual Christmas truces. But he called it "a very small step in the right direction."

Lawmakers seek aid for fishing towns hurt by salmon shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Northwest lawmakers asked President Clinton Thursday to help coastal communities in Oregon and Washington rocked by shortages in Pacific salmon fisheries.

"We are seeking emergency assistance to deal with this crisis," four senators and 13 representatives wrote in a letter to Clinton. "Salmon fishing is the mainstay of many rural coastal communities."

The Commerce Department recently approved $30 million for an emergency assistance program for fishermen in New England. The situation in the Pacific Northwest is "just as dire and compelling," the lawmakers said.

In additional to federal small business loans and job training programs, the fishing communities should qualify soon for federal disaster assistance, the lawmakers said.

"This disaster was not caused primarily by over-fishing, fraud or is due to two consecutive years of drought and El Nino conditions," they wrote.

A host of federal agencies already are involved with the region's fisheries, which have suffered such serious declines that managers are taking drastic steps to save some species.

The Pacific Fisheries Management Council has announced its intention to ban all fishing off the coasts of Washington and northern Oregon for the entire 1994 fishing season.

"The anticipated closure of commercial and recreational salmon fishing will have an immediate and devastating impact," said Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash. "It is time for the federal, state and local agencies to coordinate their efforts to restore the vitality of salmon stocks throughout the Pacific Northwest."

The National Marine Fisheries Service has adopted a tentative plan to alter management of the hydroelectric dams that are blamed for much of the population decline among migrating salmon in the Columbia and Snake river systems.

But a federal judge in Portland, Ore., ruled this week that NMFS has to rewrite the plan. U.S. District Judge Malcolm Marsh said the government had taken only "relatively small steps, minor improvements and adjustments ... when the situation literally cries out for a major overhaul."

5-month probe ends in drug bust

JEROME – A drug bust in Jerome sent a man to jail and ended a five-month investigation.

Manuel Barcelos, 39, was arraigned Wednesday on a felony charge of possession of methamphetamine and misdemeanor charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. He is in the Jerome jail with a $25,000 bond.

The investigation and surveillance of Barcelos' apartment started in November after citizens' complaints to police, said Jerry Martinez, detective with the North side Narcotic Task Force.

A search warrant was obtained Tuesday. Barcelos was arrested at 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Other charges are pending, Martinez said.

About 17 grams of methamphetamine with a street value of about $2,100, one ounce of marijuana and the paraphernalia were seized in the drug bust, he said.

"We give credit to the concerned people who called in to report the suspected crime," Martinez said.

Solano hearing ends; counsel will advise panel

TWIN FALLS – The appeal hearing for fired traffic court clerk Rose Solano ended early Thursday afternoon after eight hours of testimony that stretched over two days.

"A lot of evidence was presented on the appellant's part," county Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said.

Bevan represented County Clerk Bob Fort, who fired Solano 3½ weeks ago amid allegations that funds missing from the clerk's office were not reported.

As part of its defense, the county pointed to Solano's guilty plea in 1988 to charges of second-degree burglary, Bevan said Thursday.

Solano's attorney, Lisa Barini-Garcia, has said that her client is being made the scapegoat for broader negligence within the clerk's office.

The commissioners will appoint an independent counsel to advise the appeals board in the week before it is required to reach a decision, Bevan said.

Deputy prosecutor Kemp resigns from office

A news release from the prosecuting attorney's office states that the caseload was too large to handle on the part-time basis Kemp was working. Kemp said she could not balance the demands of her family and the job of handling the juvenile caseload in the county.

Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said Kemp did an "exemplary job" and dedicated far more time than was required of a part-time worker.

"I regret to see Kandace leave this office, but she was forced to handle a full-time caseload on a part-time basis," Bevan stated in the release.

Bevan said he will meet with the commissioners to talk about staffing. Realistically, the office could benefit from a full-time chief deputy and a full-time attorney on juvenile cases, he said.

Candidate declaration for offices ends today

TWIN FALLS – Today is the final day that residents can declare their candidacies for countywide or statewide office.

The county clerk's office will accept petitions and official declarations of candidacy until 5 p.m. today at the County Courthouse.

Canal company releases water for irrigation

The canal system will be charged and irrigation water will be available during the week of April 11, depending on irrigators' location on the system. For more information, call 733-6731.

Fish and Game's pheasant boost starts slow

By William Brock
Times-News writer

JEROME – At least five cats, four skunks and two foxes have been trapped and killed this week in the Magic Valley by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, according to the department's regional supervisor.

The trap-and-kill program, intended to boost pheasant numbers, got off to a slow start with only two skunks caught Monday night, but Tuesday night yielded a harvest of two skunks, two cats and two foxes, said supervisor Carl Nellis. On Wednesday night, department traps snared another three cats and one dog, but the dog was released, Nellis said.

A Fish and Game memo has specified all trapped predators that are not pets be killed with gunshots to the head or poison. The corpses will be sent to a laboratory in Boise for examination.

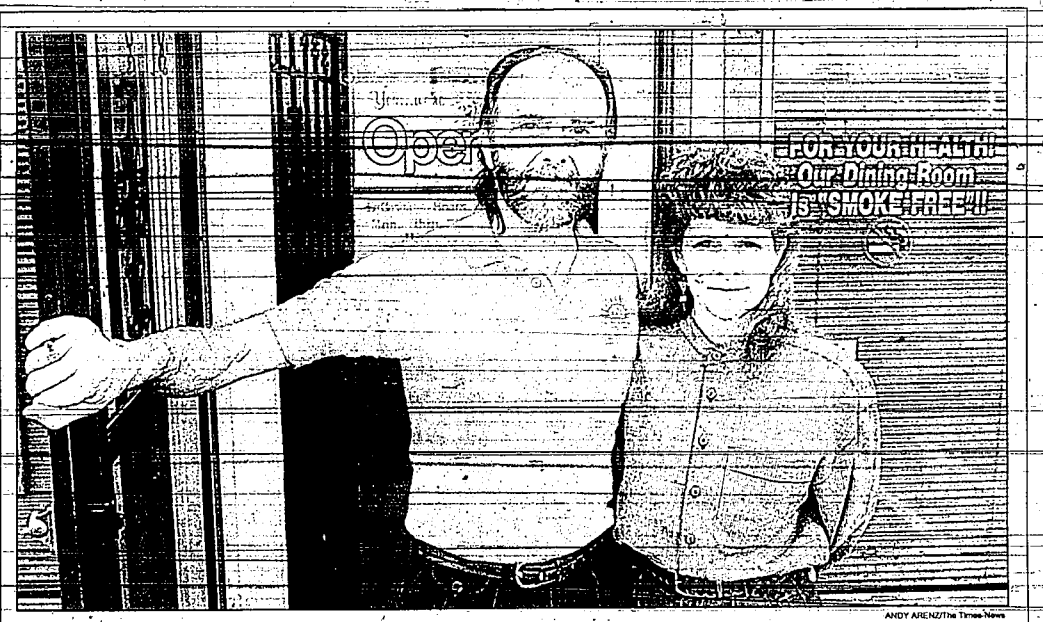

Any domestic animals injured in the traps will be treated at the department's expense, the memo said.

The dog was obviously a pet, Nellis said, adding there is a chance that some of the cats may have been pets, too.

"The possibility always exists," Nellis said, "but we're not setting (traps) close to anybody's home or buildings. None of them had any collars on, and I suppose some of them could have been barn cats."

There are now 65 traps set across northern and southern Gooding County and parts of Jerome County. The program calls for a total of 70 traps, to be set every night for a week.

The trap-and-kill program is intended to gather information about animals that prey on pheasants. Next year, the program will be limited to only two areas – but will be much more intensive, Nellis said.

Ken and Lora Schmidt of La Casita Restaurant are among a growing number of business owners closing doors on smoking.

Businesses honored for smoke-free buildings

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A year ago, Ken and Lora Schmidt debated whether or not to ban all smoking in their La Casita Mexican Restaurant.

"We have a very small restaurant so anyone smoking affects everyone in the building," Ken Schmidt said.

So last May they banned smoking, and despite a few complaints they have been busy receiving calls, post cards and people coming into their restaurant to shake their hands to thank them.

"I regained customers that I had lost," he said. "Our business has not suffered one tiny bit."

La Casita was one of 75 local business honored Thursday by the American Cancer Society for becoming smoke free. A ceremony honoring the businesses was held in the Magic Valley Mall, which along with its stores has banned smoking.

Kathleen Sivulich, administrative director of the Southern Idaho Regional Cancer Center, said she has noticed a gradual trend among businesses to ban smoking.

"Business owners are paying for health insurance for their employees. And employees who smoke use more of their health insurance than employees who don't," she said.

The J.C. Penney store in the mall had tried and failed at to control smoking, including limiting smoking to the lunch room and installing a new ventilation system for six employees who smoked, said manager John Fiske. So last June the store simply banned it.

"It's just made our work environment so much nicer," Fiske said.

Most of the smoke-free business the Cancer Society has found have been in the mall.

Last July the mall banned smoking and put little placards over the old ash trays near benches, said Deborah Dane, marketing director for the mall.

"We've had some complaints, but 99 percent of the response has been thanks. This will really help," Dane said looking down at "No Smoking" signs the Cancer Society gave out to the smoke-free businesses honored.

Many retailers are concerned that smokers can leave an odor on merchandise or burn items.

Still, employee health was the main concern of many business that banned smoking, said Ron Lind, general manager of The Bon Marche in the mall, which has been smoke free for three years.

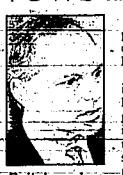

Dr. David McClusky thanked the businesses that are smoke free.

"It's not an issue of finance, it's a issue of health. ... It's not an issue of being politically-correct, it's an issue of doing what's best for the environment," McClusky said.

Secondhand smoke is a cause of disease in healthy nonsmokers and may kill as many as 53,000 Americans each year, according to the Cancer Society. Roughly 4,200 Idahoans will be diagnosed with cancer this year.

Beitelspacher vows hard work as governor

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

Beitelspacher

TWIN FALLS – Ron Beitelspacher brought his traditional blue-collar brand of Democratic politics to the Magic Valley to rally support in his race for the nomination for governor.

His hastily knotted neck tie askew, he said Idaho's politicians lack the energy to rally Idahoans to plan for the future and correct problems long neglected, such as urban sprawl and problems with use of the rivers.

"I wouldn't be in this if I didn't think I could win," said the 49-year-old who is on a leave of absence as a lineman for Washington Water Power in Grangeville. He is traveling the state campaigning in 10-day cycles, resting on the 10th day.

"The biggest issue facing the next governor is growth and everything is related to it – schools, lack of jobs, an inadequate highway system, crime," Beitelspacher said.

"I've got to get the people of this state focused on their future," he said.

His plan as gov. or is to listen to what Idahoans expect from growth. Then, the Legislature needs to come up with statewide measures to deal with growth. Beitelspacher said he wants the Legislature to consider impact fees on new construction and mandate statewide municipal planning.

His idea of constantly going out and talking to voters as governor is prevalent in this campaign.

"When in the last 12 years have you seen the governor get out of Boise and ask the people what they want?" he asked.

He wants more spending for schools. Roughly half the state budget is spent on public schools and as governor he said he would spend two or three days a week visiting almost every school district in the state.

Beitelspacher also said he favors phasing out state property taxes over four years and replacing them with higher sales taxes, particularly on the service industry to pay for better schools.

Among his other stands:

- Abortion – he would veto any attempts the Legislature might choose to "infringe upon a woman's right to chose."
- Mountain Home – he opposes a proposed bomb-training range in southwestern Owyhee County.
- Water rights – he supports the Idaho Supreme Court's recent decision that water users with the oldest water rights get priority to water in the Snake River.

Sheriff asks commission for more money

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousley has asked a judge to order the county commission to give him more money to run his department.

In a complaint filed Wednesday in 5th District Court, Tousley claims that the commissioners have not budgeted the sheriff's department enough money to meet its constitutional duties.

"I really had no other alternative at this point," Tousley said Thursday.

With 12 deputies available for three shifts, the sheriff's department often has three or fewer deputies to patrol the entire county, Tousley said. This exposes the county to undue liability, he said in the court action.

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Jim Fraley said Thursday he was sorry Tousley filed the suit, but the commissioners tried to work with him.

"I'm sorry he's not cooperating. ... Frankly, I'm tired of it," Fraley said.

A third party offered to mediate the dispute between Tousley and the commissioners. Tousley and his attorney, Laird Stone, said Thursday that the commissioners did not respond to the offer; Fraley said Tousley showed no interest.

Besides, "There's nothing to work out. If there was money, I would let him have it. There isn't any money," Fraley said.

The county commissioners imposed a budget freeze last fall, saying they had dipped too far into a reserve fund to buoy department budgets the past several years.

Tousley then asked the commissioners for money to hire an attorney to press his case over the budget, saying that the county prosecutor would be in a conflict of interest representing both the commission and him.

The commission refused, and an Idaho Falls judge agreed that under Idaho law the commissioners did not have to give Tousley money for an attorney.

The judge said Tousley and Lincoln County Sheriff Steve Southwick, who also

Senate passes water bills

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE – The photocopy machines in the Statehouse whirred all day Thursday, as Idaho legislators hurried to draft, debate, amend and pass a half-dozen major water bills before adjourning for 1994.

The complex package of legislation attempts to (1) revise the rules governing the Snake River Basin Adjudication, (2) effectively overturn the Idaho Supreme Court's recent decision in the "Musser" case, and (3) authorize a pilot project to recharge the Snake River Plain Aquifer to boost spring flows in the Hagerman area.

Some of the 16 (at last count) bills comprising the package already have been passed by both the House and Senate. But the most critical ones were drafted just days, hours – or, in some cases, minutes – before they were considered in committee.

By late Thursday evening the full House had passed all but one of those bills. A Senate committee has scheduled a four-hour hearing on them for Friday morning.

Wendell council faces conflicts over construction

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL – The City Council this week decide to file a lawsuit against a resident for failing to dismantle a shed that violates city code.

Herbert Lage, 221 Wendell St. built a shed within the 7-foot setback of an alley. But a variance was illegally approved in December.

The council rescinded the variance in January and ordered Lage to dismantle the shed.

Another shed also was the subject of controversy. Jim Fox asked the council to override building inspector Sonny Henry's order to cease construction.

Henry said he stopped Fox because he wanted assurance from an engineer that Fox's construction materials were sound and because he didn't have a building permit.

Fox argued that he was stopped because he not get a concrete contract from Henry, who also is a self-employed contractor.

Councilman Dale Bunn said it would be a simple matter for Fox to have an engineer evaluate his construction materials.

Wendell real estate developer Debbie Mink wants the city to put in streets, sewers and water lines in an area where she wants to build a series of homes.

Councilwoman Connie Bjornn said because Mink plans to sell the houses for profit, Mink should bear all costs. Under the city's subdivision ordinance, the developer must pay for infrastructure.

Regarding construction in the southeast corner of town, Bruce Olsen of Twin Falls asked the council for a response on the contract he offered the city two weeks earlier.

He had offered cash and some materials in exchange for having the city pave streets and install sewer and water systems.

Olsen asked the council to work with him to modify the contract.

Council President Michael Wetzstein said that Olsen's plans are not in an area of existing development, required for the city to pay infrastructure costs.

Olsen withdrew his contract, saying it obviously was not going to be approved.

In other business:

• Fred McCloud explained why buying a new garbage truck that could be operated by one man would be cheaper for the city than the present decrepit truck and 3-man crew. Nelson said McCloud's proposal makes sense for the city.

• The council will advertise a bid for a 5-year lease on the city's lagoon sprinkler field. The field can't be used to grow crops for human consumption or for pasture.

• The council denied a request from the police department to purchase pistols for police officers and deduct the cost from the officers' paychecks.

City attorney Craig Hobdey said the city would be illegally acting as a weapons dealer.

• Accepted Police Chief Jim Arnold Margado as a permanent employee and raised his salary to $1,300 per month retroactive to Feb. 1.

• Approved refunding late dog license penalties to 40 pet owners.

Community action team releases plan

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE – Community leaders have drafted plans for revitalizing the city and its economy, calling for improvements in the city water system and more support for local businesses.

In a report released this week, Shoshone's Gem Community Development Group has identified a list of long-term and short-term goals aimed at improving the town's infrastructure and diversifying its economy.

"We're mainly concerned with developing a sense of pride in the community and preserving the quality of life here," said Christy Pyles, chairman of the group that has been meeting monthly for the past year.

The list of goals was drawn in part from a community-wide survey conducted last fall.

"There was a surprising amount of cohesiveness in the responses we got and what the team was already thinking of," Pyles pointed out.

Long-term infrastructure improvement projects listed by the group on its wish list include obtaining control of the Union Pacific train depot for use as a museum, increasing participation in recreation district programs, and "creating a local business environment in which small business can prosper."

The development group also noted the need to improve storage and distribution of city water and to upgrade local school buildings.

In the immediate future, the group identified projects aimed at enhancing and promoting the community, such as the installation of planter boxes along Rail Street, the construction of a train viewing platform, a new mural on the side of the old Hansen's department store building, and a Shoshone business directory.

A historical walking tour through downtown Shoshone is also being developed, according to Pyles, perhaps with the assistance of the Idaho Transportation Department.

Copies of the community development group's plan for Shoshone are available at Shoshone City Hall and the Shoshone City Library. Public comments on the document are requested through April 6. Write to the Shoshone Gem Community Development Group, c/o Christy Pyles, P.O. Box 792, Shoshone, ID 83352

Appeals court rules for Twin Falls

The Associated Press

BOISE – Twin Falls has won another round in the fight over its decision to allow a state community work center to be built in the city's area of impact.

The Idaho Court of Appeals ruled unanimously on Thursday that the work center leased by the state Department of Corrections was allowed in the area under city zoning ordinances as a "governmental protective facility."

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt upheld a 1991 decision by the Twin Falls Area of Impact Board of Appeals that a governmental protective facility was not a prohibited residential use in the area, which is zoned for light manufacturing.

But he also agreed with nearby residents who argued on appeal that a city ordinance required a governmental protective facility to actually be owned by a government agency. The Department of Corrections leases the work center from local property owner Reed Gould.

The three-judge Court of Appeals upheld Hurlbutt's ruling, and it said a change in the city ordinance later removing the ownership requirement could not be applied retroactively to the work center.

However, the court also cited a provision in the city code allowing a use in the area other than those specified if the zoning administrator finds "that the distinction between them is of little consequence."

After Hurlbutt's ruling that a governmental protective facility must be owned by a government agency, Gould asked the city zoning administrator whether there was any significant distinction between a work center owned by a government agency and the same facility leased by a government agency.

The zoning administrator ruled on July 29, 1992, that the distinction was of "little or no consequence."

The Court of Appeals refused to consider whether that decision was valid because the neighbors fighting the work center never appealed it to the Area of Impact Board of Appeals or to the district court.

Legislature considers other water bills

The Times-News

Martells buy rival cable company

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

GLENNS FERRY – Just before the Martell family was about to start up a second cable television system for this small town, the family bought out its future competitor.

The Martells' Snake River Cable Co. bought out Cable-Scope Thursday.

"Their owners just offered it to us, and we bought it," said Mark Martell, although he wouldn't give the terms of the sale.

The Martell family was upset with the way Pennsylvania-based Cable-Scope provided cable TV to Glenns Ferry. In February the family decided to start its own state-of-the-art cable system based on fiber-optic cables such as those used for telephones.

Mark Martell said his company intends to repair the existing cable system to improve the reception to viewers this month. Later, the system will be converted to fiber optics.

The Martells also own and operate Rural Telephone Co. in Glenns Ferry, which provides phone service to isolated rural locations in Twin Falls, Owyhee, Elmore and Lemhi counties.

He said Cable-Scope's three employees won't come over to Snake River Cable, which has two full-time workers.

The sale includes the accounts of Cable-Scope's 400 subscribers.

The Glenns Ferry City Council gave Cable-Scope permission to operate its cable system there through 2005. In February, the council agreed to let the Martells start up their own cable system to compete.

Senate clears revised school aid package

BOISE (AP) — Senate Republicans on Thursday easily approved the revised $620.5 million public school aid package over Democrats' objections that it falls millions of dollars short of meeting the requirements of a new distribution formula.

The bill now goes to the House, where the final vote today is expected to be one of the last before the 1994 session adjourns.

The total matched that of a state aid package endorsed by the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee earlier this month, but the way the cash was earmarked had to be adjusted to work with a revised formula that the Legislature sent to Gov. Cecil Andrus on Wednesday.

Although $92.5 million more than schools are receiving this year, the total is $3 million less than the amount requested by a coalition of education leaders and used as a basis by local school superintendents for developing the new distribution formula.

Water

In one way or another, all the bills relate to the Idaho Supreme Court's Musser ruling. In its Feb. 28 decision, the court upheld the absolute priority rights of Alvin and Tim Musser, who hold an 1892 water right at the Martin-Curran Tunnel, over groundwater pumpers with more junior rights.

Several influential legislators and water lawyers believe that, as a result of the decision, if the Musers now issue a "call" for water thousands of pumpers across southern Idaho could be shut off.

One of the key bills in the package – introduced Thursday morning and headed for passage in the House Thursday night – effectively would reverse the Musser decision.

It would give the state director of water resources the option to ignore a call against appropriators who are outside organized water districts – as nearly every groundwater pumper is. That could protect the pumpers should the Mussers make a call.

The bill also would require parties aggrieved by a decision of the director to appeal it administratively before going to court.

Another major part of the package – a pilot project to recharge that part of the aquifer that feeds into the Hagerman-area springs, including the Martin-Curran tunnel – fell into place Thursday morning, after the federal Bureau of Reclamation agreed to buy 45,000 acre-feet of water from the Upper Snake water bank for the project.

John Keys, the bureau's Pacific Northwest regional director, said his agency would pay $2.95 an acre-foot for the water, or $132,750. The right to that water belongs to the city of Pocatello.

"We have a 12-page bill to 'fix' 969, which we passed less than 48 hours ago, because we did it in such a hurry.'
Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer

Under the project, 45,000 acre-feet of water destined for Idaho Power's hydroelectric plant below Milner Dam, will instead be diverted and run through the North Side Canal Co.'s system and poured into the ground near Shoshone.

In July or August, Keys said, he will buy Pocatello's water and run it down the Snake River to augment flows, in an effort to aid migrating salmon smolts. The water will generate electricity for Idaho Power as it passes through Milner, thereby compensating the utility.

As the finishing touches were being put on that deal, the Legislature's budget committee was voting to appropriate another $75,000 to reimburse North Side Canal Co. for use of its delivery system.

"This is a big mistake, to try to jam all this legislation through in the last 24 hours of the session," said Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer.

"We have a 12-page bill to 'fix' 969, which we passed less than 48 hours ago, because we did it in such a hurry," Jones said. House Bill 969 – 31 pages long – rewrites the rules governing the Snake River Basin Adjudication.

Twin Falls attorney John Hepworth, who successfully represented the Mussers in their original case last year and before the Supreme Court, called much of the legislation unconstitutional and predicted it would be voided in court.

"What they're trying to do is overturn 150 years of water law," Hepworth said. "The director (of water resources) has had the responsibility to distribute water and uphold prior appropriation since at least 1915. They would undo all that water history and water law just to circumvent the Musser case."

But House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb, one of three lawmakers steering the water package through the Legislature, said he wasn't trying to change the "first in time, first in right" doctrine, but merely change how it is administered.

Tousley

asked to hire his own attorney in a legal wrangle with his commission, had three options:

• Appeal in court the commissioners' decisions to deny the sheriffs' requests to hire attorneys.

• Argue in court that the Idaho Constitution allows them to hire attorneys.

• Ask their county prosecuting attorneys to appoint special prosecutors to look into their concerns.

Tousley has appealed the commission's denial of his request, but that has not come to court yet. He considered asking Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan to hire a special prosecutor, but conceded Bevan's budget would not allow him to do so.

That leaves the third option – going to court.

The complaint also asks for money to pay for Stone's legal services. Stone said Thursday he is not being paid out of county funds.

"I can't say if or how much I'm getting paid because of confidentiality," Stone said. "But I'm receiving no county funds."

While refusing to pay for Tousley's attorney, the commissioners hired their own private counsel last fall, John Hepworth of Twin Falls, because Bevan was stuck in the middle of the dispute.

State plans road repairs throughout Mini-Cassia region

LIZ WRIGHT/The Times-News

Phil Glover and Myrna Broncho remove the concrete forms on a pillar for the new Downard Bridge Wednesday. The old state Highway 25 bridge behind them will be demolished in September.

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT – The pavement on the old wooden Downard Bridge could break, sending someone into the river if heavy trucks continue to ignore warning signs while workers repair a cracked pillar.

"Someone could go into the water," Loren Thomas, district four engineer for the Idaho Transportation Department said.

Trucks of more than five tons per axle are barred from the 38-year-old state Highway 25 bridge over the Snake River between Declo and Rupert.

But heavy trucks still pass over anyway, Thomas said.

"Someone told me the other day, 'hey, I drove across it and it was fine,'" he said.

One of ten wooden pillars supporting the bridge has cracked near the water line. The bridge was built from parts of an even older bridge – some parts could be up to 60 years old, Thomas said.

Workers began repairs Wednesday, Thomas said.

Meanwhile, the bridge replacing the Downard Bridge will open in August, Thomas said. Construction started last July on the 1,123-foot concrete bridge.

The new bridge will be wider with straighter approaches. The approaches to the existing bridge are almost 90-degree and have been the scene of many accidents including some fatalities, Thomas said.

In other parts of Minidoka and Cassia counties, other road repairs will slow traffic through the year.

• Idaho Highway 25 between Paul and Rupert: Workers are widening and resurfacing the two-lane highway between Paul and Rupert. Flaggers have been closing off one lane of traffic at a time for a 4½ mile stretch. The work should be finished in September, Thomas said.

• Interstate 84 between the Sweetzer interchange and Juniper rest area: Crews are removing the top layer of pavement and will replace it for 15 miles. They also will repair two bridges, one at the Juniper interchange, and one three miles south. Work is expected to be finished by August.

Traffic has slowed to a maximum of 55 miles per hour as flaggers close off one lane of the four-lane highway, Thomas said.

• Idaho Highway 77 from 500 South to Declo: Workers are repairing cracks and potholes and widening the lanes to 12 feet each, with two additional feet of paved shoulder, for 4.2 miles. In the next several months, traffic will detour around the construction. Work is expected to finish by August.

Other projects will start in the next several months.

• Idaho Highway 27 at the junction of Alfresco Road in Burley: Workers will widen the corners of the intersection so that trucks can turn easier, Thomas said. Traffic-actuated signals also will be installed.

• Idaho Highway 81 from Declo to Burley: Workers will lay three-inch deep pavement and seal coat on 7.65 miles of Highway 81. The project will start sometime in May. Work may finish this summer.

Traffic could be delayed for up to 15 minutes, Thomas said.

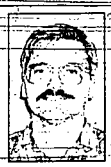

• Idaho Highway 77 from Declo to the Declo Interstate 84 interchange: Workers will lay three-inch deep pavement and seal coat on 3.4 miles of Highway 77. Work may start sometime in May and end sometime this summer.

2 candidates challenge Beck in Cassia County Commissioner race

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

Smith

Christensen

BURLEY – Two Burley men are challenging incumbent Cassia County Commissioner Weldon Beck in the May primary election.

Dale Smith, 61, and Paul Christensen, 40, are running against Beck, 83, who has served on the county board since 1959.

All three are Republicans.

Smith, who owns Smith's Oil Co., a wholesale gasoline distributor, ran for county commissioner two years ago and lost.

Christensen, a farmer and Beck's neighbor, has never run for public office before. He has thought about running for several years. He decided Thursday to give it a shot, he said.

"I feel like people want a change, and I have things I can offer," Christensen said.

Smith said one of the top issues is water. As commissioner, he would encourage irrigators to be more frugal with their water.

Recycling is also an issue, Smith said. To cut down on trash, he would place several recycling bins throughout the county and put a note in people's utility bills. He also would urge people to stop burning waste in metal bins.

As a way to curb the rise in juvenile crime, Smith would encourage parents to organize a group that stresses the importance of communicating with their children.

Christensen, who has served for seven years on the county's law enforcement advisory committee, said juvenile crime also is one of his main concerns.

As a member of the committee, Christensen reviews juvenile criminal records, which are closed to the public. He advocates lobbying the state to allow public access to those records.

"Society has a right to know," he said.

He also would encourage people to show an interest in the sentencing of criminals.

"Judges may be a little softer unless citizens are there, just to make the pressure known," he said.

Christensen said Beck has been like a tutor to him and recommended he run for office when Beck decided to retire.

Beck, however, said he plans to run again and address issues such as water and growth.

Water should not be used for salmon "flushes." Instead water should be used for farmers, he said. Agriculture is critical to the county's economy and could suffer with less water, which in turn means less food.

"We can't live on potato chips all the time can we?" said Beck, who farms west of Burley.

If re-elected for a 13th term, Beck said he would encourage Minidoka and Cassia counties to plan their development together.

The deadline for filing for county office is 5 p.m. today.

Malta woman declared missing

BURLEY – A Malta woman who had left the state to visit her mother has been declared missing by police Wednesday when she didn't return home last weekend.

Toni Luann Rosenbaum, 35, has not telephoned her husband, Edward, since last Thursday, and police have been unable to contact her. She was in Kingston Springs, Tenn., having her teeth fixed the last time she called, according to a police report.

Rosenbaum is Caucasian, 5 feet tall and weighs 130 pounds. On March 24, she had planned to drive her bronze 1979 Dodge Colt to Las Vegas, Nev., then home, the report said.

She had been staying with Maggie and Kenneth Rooney in their trailer park in Kingston before she left. Police have been unable to contact the Rooney's since March 19, Kingston police said, according to the report.

He told police that his wife has a scar on her right hip from a bullet wound dating back to a time when a man who was shooting at her ex-husband hit her instead, the report said.

Leaders say town needs promotion

OAKLEY – Out-of-towners who stop, eat, sleep and spend money in Oakley help the area to flourish – but the town needs to promote itself, business leaders say.

The public is invited meet with the Oakley Economic Development Committee from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. April 14 to discuss how to take advantage of tourists that flocks to the City of Rocks National Reserve every year.

Money spent by tourists will boost the stagnant economy, lure in businesses and families. This will in turn create a higher tax base and create more political clout in the county, said Sharon Jones, public relations officer for the committee.

The town could spruce up it's deteriorating downtown, set up gift shops, book stores and offer horseback trail rides, she said.

"We need something to attract people to the area," Jones said.

But the committee wants to ease the people's fears of growth. With careful planning, the community can preserve it's small-town charm, she said.

The workshop will be attended by Joe Herring, executive director of Region IV Development, Kay Pranci, of the Idaho Department of Commerce and Peter Fisher, an economic development specialist.

The meeting will be in the Senior Citizens Building.

Noh casts decisive vote; upholds Andrus' veto

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus saw another senator from his own party defect on Thursday, but this time the Democratic chief executive got help from a Republican senator to avoid a second straight veto override.

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, plugged the gap left by the defection of Pocatello Democrat C.E. Bilyeu, that gave the Democratic minority the 12 votes needed to sustain the governor's veto of the diversion of $10 million in state highway money to city, county and regional road funds.

"The Legislature simply cannot continue to give away existing highway construction and maintenance revenue and still expect safe, quality roads and bridges," Andrus said in his veto message.

He specifically cited the first veto override he suffered. That came last week when another Pocatello Democrat, Bob Kinghorn, sitting in for his sister, Mary Lloyd, evened a personal score with Andrus by joining Republicans to enact a fuel tax break for the ethanol industry over Andrus' objections.

Bilyeu, the senior member of the Senate, could face a tough re-election campaign in a relatively new district that is much more rural than he was used to since reapportionment.

The governor claimed that in addition to the up to $1.7 million in state fuel tax revenues last week's ethanol tax break will cost, the state will use millions of dollars more in federal matching funds.

But backers of that tax break and the $10 million diversion to local road funds disputed the governor's financial assessment. They pointed out that state highway officials acknowledge their property tax take by the state — Idaho has never lost a federal highway dollar because it did not have the state cash to match it.

Noh

There is a tremendous need for local road maintenance and construction," Senate Transportation Chairman Dennis Hansen of Soda Springs said.

He argued that the diversion amounted to local property tax relief, although Democrats pointed out there was nothing in the bill to require local road districts to offset amount of extra state cash they receive.

Hansen also argued that the $10 million is part of a longstanding $20 million state reserve that the Transportation Board has been repeatedly told to reduce, but did not until lawmakers started talking about diverting the money to local governments.

Then, he argued, the board found projects on which it wanted to spend the cash.

But critics of the diversion pointed out that the local road districts have a combined reserves totaling over $60 million. They also said that many of the local road projects the Legislature dumped millions of dollars into in 1990 are still not completed.

"Stripping these dollars from the state budget in order to sprinkle a little money on every highway district is simply shortsighted, wasteful, and not in the best interest of taking care of our transportation assets," Andrus said.

GOP makes last attempt at impasse

BOISE (AP) — Republican budget writers Thursday made a final — but probably futile — offer to end the impasse with Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus over state payment of indigent medical bills.

With the Democratic minority's support, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee approved $1 million for one-year health insurance policies on up to 3,300 poor children — a substitute for financing what it sees as a much more expensive extension of Medicaid benefits to the working poor.

The package also includes $9 million to cover the cost of catastrophic health care services — expenses over $10,000 — provided to poor people under a program that has been supported by local property taxes.

As time ran out in the 1994 legislative session, the GOP called the plan a compromise to end the three-year battle with Andrus over its demand for state payment of the counties' catastrophic health care bills and his demand for financing of the so-called Medically Needy program of extended Medicaid benefits.

"This is the best thing I think we can come up with," Republican Rep. Ralph Steele of Idaho Falls said just before the package was unanimously approved.

But within minutes of the committee's decision, Andrus said again that he would not agree to state payment of catastrophic health care bills without a legitimate financial commitment to the Medically Needy program.

He said the substitution of the insurance scheme for the Medically Needy program "is not acceptable."

Payette principal announces candidacy

BOISE (AP) — Willie Sullivan said he wants to make sure schools are the center of Idaho's communities, and that the state has a vision for education into the 21st century."

The principal at Payette's Warren McCain Middle School formally announced his Democratic candidacy for state superintendent of public instruction Thursday at the Statehouse.

"I am running because I have dedicated my life to education and I want to work to help Idaho's schools overcome the obstacles that are stopping our children from getting the education they deserve," Sullivan said.

He began his announcement swing Wednesday in Coeur d'Alene. Stops were planned Thursday in Pocatello and Idaho Falls and today in Twin Falls.

Sullivan, 47, becomes the first Democrat to formally announce his candidacy to succeed Republican Superintendent Jerry Evans, who is retiring after this year. Former Nampa School District Superintendent Steve Schmitz also has indicated he plans to seek the Democratic nomination.

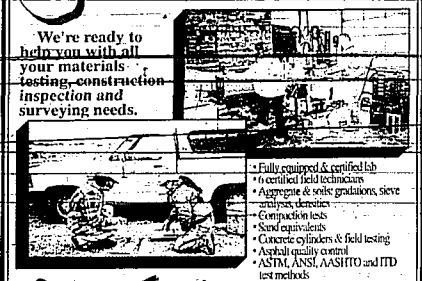

Anne Fox of Coeur d'Alene and Associate State Superintendent Bob Dutton are running in the Republican primary.

Sullivan was president of the Idaho Education Association during the 1979-80 school year. He also has served two terms on the state Department of Education's Professional Standards Commission, including three years as chairman.

The former Caldwell elementary school teacher said Idaho's schools have three basic problems: Too many no longer are the center of the community; state-mandated programs are undermining local control and discouraging innovations to improve education; and state has no long-term education strategy.

Competency hearing set for Lafferty

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Ron Lafferty, whose convictions in the 1984 deaths of a woman and her daughter were overturned by a federal appeals court, is to have a competency hearing to determine if he is able to stand trial again.

Lafferty and his brother, Dan Lafferty, both were convicted of the July 24, 1984, killings of their sister-in-law, Brenda Wright Lafferty, 24, and her 15-month-old daughter, Erica, in their American Fork home.

Brenda Wright Lafferty was a native of Kimberly, Idaho.

Ron Lafferty was sentenced to death, but his brother received a life prison term. Both said the killings were ordered by God.

In December 1991, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a new trial for Ron Lafferty, saying that if the trial judge had used the proper standard Lafferty might have been judged incompetent in part for his religious delusions.

The following November, 4th District Judge George E. Ballif found Lafferty incompetent after doctors testified that the man's delusions manifested through religious ideas and distrust for the judicial system.

Since then, Lafferty has been undergoing treatment at Utah State Hospital. His hearing is scheduled April 4 before 4th District Judge Steven L. Hansen.

Three doctors who recently evaluated Lafferty are to testify. If Hansen finds Lafferty competent, he will be transferred to the Utah County Jail and a trial date set.

Neither prosecutors nor Lafferty's defense attorney, Michael Esplin, have spoken about the hearing.

But Janina Chilton, spokeswoman at the state hospital, said doctors reports indicate Lafferty now is competent to aid in his own defense.

"Of course that determination will be made by the judge, but from the two reports we've seen, our sense is that he very well may be found competent," Chilton said. "His condition has improved greatly and we believe that the recommendation will be that he is now competent to proceed."

She said Lafferty has not been a problem patient, has shown no signs of violence and has made no threats to escape.

Two weeks ago, Utah County commissioners approved a contract that would pay Esplin $100,000 to represent Lafferty if he goes to trial again. Esplin would refund $50,000 if Lafferty accepts a plea bargain.

Two assistant state attorney generals would prosecute the case. They took over after a judge ruled the county attorney's office had a conflict of interest because several deputy attorneys once worked with Esplin.

Centennial scholarship winner excels

MERIDIAN (AP) — Centennial High School senior John Jackson hasn't really thought a lot about race during his school days — science, soccer and his social life were more pressing concerns.

But cultural heritage is important in his life. His father is black, his mother is Asian.

This year, his background combined with his studies have made him one of the nation's 600 winners in the National Achievement Scholarship Program. The program is an annual academic competition for college-bound black students sponsored by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

He is Idaho's only winner of the $2,000 one-time scholarship.

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

BUHL – More comfortable on a baseball field than in a pinup pose, Tony Severa could become "Guy of the Year" – whether he likes it or not.

Tony's sister nominated him for the "Teen Magazine and c.n.u.f. International's Guy of the Year" contest, but she didn't tell him about it. Last week, he was named a regional semi-finalist, one of 216 guys chosen from more than 10,000 entrants.

"I wrote in the entry that he is always there for me when I need him," said 13-year-old Abbie Severa. "I said he has the qualities to be No. 1." Abbie added, with a laugh, "We've always gotten along well ... until now."

"I was mad at first," said 17-year-old Tony, who has since come to accept his lot-in-hunkdom. "I saw the letter from Teen that she was trying to hide from me, and that's how I found out."

Tony's photo and biography will be featured in the May issue of the magazine. Then it will be up to Teen readers to choose guy number one. The winner will receive $5,000 in cash and prizes, including a trip to Los Angeles.

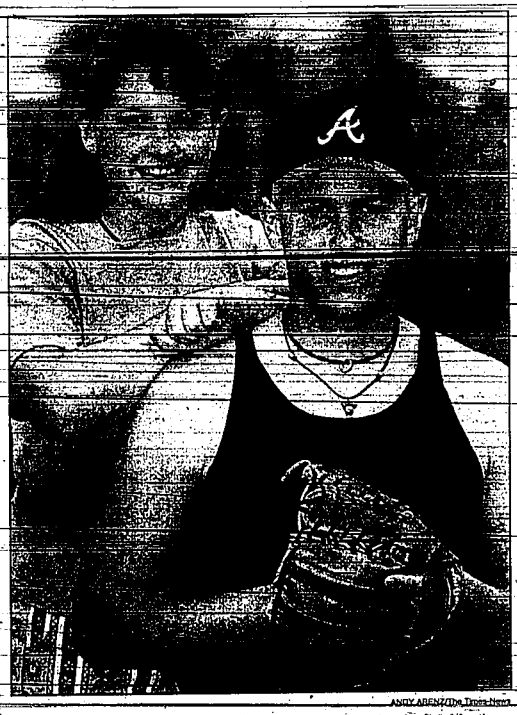

According to the magazine, the search is on for a guy who is good looking, a good student, a good athlete, a good family member and a good friend.

"Tony is the one," said Abbie, a Teen subscriber who characterized her brother as "better looking than the guy who won last year."

Born and raised in Buhl, Tony is 6 feet 1-inch tall and weighs 190 pounds. He has blue eyes and brown hair – though the hair has been a point of "discussion" at home lately.

"My mom postponed my senior pictures because I did this," said Tony, removing his baseball cap to reveal a bowl-shaped cut, shaved in a ring around the bottom.

"I was bored," said Tony, with the kind of crooked grin sure to win votes from those Teen readers.

ANDY ARENTZ/The Times-News

Tony Severa is starting to accept his rise as a teen-age hunk after his sister, Abbie, nominated him for 'Guy of the Year.'

Actually, Mom and Dad, better known as Bob and Tammy Severa, have told their son they think his latest escapade – the Teen honor – is really neat. The guys on his high school baseball team are a different story.

"I haven't told many, because I was hoping to keep it a secret," Tony said, "but the ones who know are really teasing me about it."

Their exact words?

"Nothing you could print," Tony said.

He added, "My baseball coach laughed and told me not to do anything that would embarrass the baseball program."

In the sexy photo that won Tony his place in the Teen semifinals, he's wearing a tuxedo. It's not his normal attire.

Tony, a high school senior, likes to wear mostly T-shirts and jeans. When he's not playing baseball, he's playing football – or skiing or riding his motorcycle.

In the summer, Tony works at Green Giant, where both his parents are employed. After he graduates from Buhl High School, where he has a 3.0 grade-point average, he will attend Mesa State College in Grand Junction, Colo., on a baseball scholarship. He will study athletics. His big dream is to become a catcher or third baseman for the Atlanta Braves.

Tony has dated quite a few girls, he said. How does he choose one?

"I look at her and, if she is good looking, then I talk to her."

Tony's current girlfriend, of two months, is a sophomore at Buhl High School. She thinks his Teen honor is "funny."

Tony has been known to be romantic, he said, and has even sent flowers to girls on occasion. But his idea of a dream date is to take a girl to the ball park – even just to swing on the swings when there is no game.

"I might take a girl to a movie," Tony said, "but somehow, we always end up at a ballpark."

'My baseball coach laughed and told me not to do anything that would embarass the baseball program.'

Local ABC affiliate captures Fox shows, NFL

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Dick McMahon is bringing Sunday football, Bart Simpson and other Fox shows to his local ABC affiliate television station.

McMahon, general manager of KKVI-TV, said the move will give his Twin Falls station NFC football on Sunday afternoons this fall. The young Fox network outbid long-time football network CBS for the rights to broadcast the games.

That means that McMahon has managed to snag one of the biggest shows his main competitor – Twin Falls CBS affiliate KMVT-TV – lost.

McMahon deal's has also stirred the ire of the Nampa station whose Fox programming is now carried by cable in most of the Magic Valley.

After a month of negotiations, he's got a two-year contract with Fox to get that network's shows, McMahon said.

Besides football this fall, KKVI will get such popular Fox shows as "The Simpsons;" "Married With Children;" "Beverly Hills 90210;" "America's Most Wanted;" "Cops;" "Sinbad;" "The George Carlin Show;" "Front Page" and "Fox Night at the Movies."

McMahon said he's still negotiating to get the rights to show two new cartoon series that Fox is making with Oscar-winning director Steven Spielberg.

KKVI will show the football games on Sunday afternoons in place of movies and paid "infomercials." And McMahon said he's not required to show the other Fox shows at their normal evening times, but will try to show them on their normal nights.

"We're going to work Fox programing around our ABC programing," he said.

But isn't Fox known as the outlandish network with risque shows such as "The Simpsons" and "Married With Children?" And isn't McMahon known for not airing network shows he finds questionable? KKVI doesn't show the late-night police drama "NYPD Blue" and he pulled a recent episode of "Roseanne" that had a brief kiss by two women.

"We'll look at these new shows the same way we looked at 'NYPD Blue' and 'Roseanne.' We'll look at them on a case-by-case basis. I already know I won't be showing some of the shows," McMahon said.

Through the KKVI/Fox relationship, Fox shows get out to more viewers and KKVI gets stronger programming to possibly attract more viewers. But McMahon won't say what the terms of the contract are or even which way any money is changing hands.

But he's happy.

And competitors aren't.

"I'm certainly not a happy camper," said Rex McArthur, general manager of Nampa Fox affiliate KRTV-TV. "I'm disappointed in Fox's action."

On Monday, when Silverstein brings his symphony to Twin Falls, he will also bring along some impressive credentials – and quite a legacy.

"I was born in Detroit, where my father was a violin teacher," Silverstein said in a phone interview on Tuesday. "I started to play (violin) when I was 3; I studied (music) in Philadelphia when I was 12, and I was working by the time I was 17."

From there, Silverstein performed with symphonies in Houston, Philadelphia, Boston and Denver and worked on the faculties at Yale and Boston universities and at the Tanglewood Music Center and the Chautauqua Institute. He moved to Salt Lake City in 1983, as music director of the Utah Symphony.

"The Utah Symphony is a top international-class orchestra," Silverstein said of the group whose repertoire he has continued to increase.

Pride of country music brings show to Jackpot

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Charley Pride has been the pride of the country music industry for a long time now. He traveled a unique road to the top.

Pride's love of baseball took center stage at first. He played professional ball from 1953 to 1965, mostly in the Negro American League.

"I played with the (Los Angeles) Angels (of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League) in '61," Pride said in a Wednesday phone interview from his Dallas office. "That was the closest I got to the majors."

Pride found that he could hit even more home runs in the music business.

Nurturing a love of country music, developed listening to the likes of Ernest Tubb and Eddy Arnold. Pride bought himself a guitar when he was 14 – and he tuned the guitar to the notes he heard on the radio.

Charley Frank Pride grew up in the country, in Mississippi. His whole family sang, though none of them ever read a note of music.

"Singing was as natural as eating breakfast for us," Pride said.

Pride started singing professionally at night clubs in Helena, Mont. By 1969, he had hit the No. 1 spot in the singles charts with "All I Have to Offer You (is Me)." By 1984, he had racked up 35 more chart-toppers, including "Kiss an Angel Good Morning," "You're So Good when You're Worries over banana safety peel away under scrutiny

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: Referring to your column concerning whether or not bananas should be washed, I am happy to say that your original conclusion – that they need not be washed – was correct.

While it probably would do no harm to wash everything one purchases to remove ordinary dust and dirt, it is usually unnecessary.

The pulp of the banana itself is sterile until the peel is removed, thus making it one of the most secure ready-to-eat foods for adults as well as children.

It is true that some permitted substances are used to ward off insects or neutralize fungi that develop in the humid tropics, but these are used well within the limits set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

At the beginning of the packaging process, the bananas are immersed in tanks of water having a mild current that carries them down the packing line. This procedure minimizes handling, gently reduces field temperature, and also serves to wash off field dust and residue.

At the end of that procedure, the bananas are packed in cardboard boxes and are loaded into refrigerated containers. They are then transferred to refrigerated vessels for shipment to the United States.

It is highly unlikely that insects or other contaminants could survive such a thorough process – and our experience over the years shows that they don't.

While some of the conditions described by your readers may have been true 70 or 80 years ago, they certainly are not true today.

Abby, please inform your readers that bananas are one of the healthiest foods people can eat. Their high fiber and potassium content make them especially valuable for older people as well as children.

– ROBERT M. MOORE, PRESIDENT, INTERNATIONAL BANANA ASSOCIATION

DEAR MR. MOORE: Thank you for the reinforcement concerning bananas. It is by far the best publicized fruit known to man, woman and monkey. Mel Brooks said he would rather eat a rotten banana than a fresh peach.

It is also the funniest fruit around. Thirty years ago, Carmen Miranda sang (if my memory serves me):

"I'm Chiquita Banana and I'm here to say/That bananas have to ripen in a certain way/You can put them in a salad, you can bake them in a pie, pie/But no matter how you eat them, it's impossible to beat them/Oh, bananas like the climate of the tropical equator/So never, never put bananas in the refrigerator." Cha-cha-cha!

DEAR ABBY: I think it's rude to ask someone how much he or she paid for something. However, I come from a family that asks that question whenever I wear something new.

If I don't tell them, they think I'm a snob. Also, I am constantly being asked where I bought this or that.

Please give me a good answer. If I try to get out of answering, they get mad. – SICK OF QUESTIONS

DEAR SICK: My standard answer to "How much did you pay for that?" is, "Why do you want to know?"

If the questioner persists, I follow up with, "If you will forgive me for not answering, I'll forgive you for asking."

I'll admit, these are not very cooperative answers, but it beats disclosing personal information you prefer to keep private.

Bad," "(I'm so) Afraid of Losing You Again," "Why Baby Why?" and "Is Anybody Goin' to San Antone?"

Along the way, Pride fell in love – and he's been kissing his own angel good morning for quite a while.

Charley has been married to Rozene Pride for 37 of his 55 years. The couple has three grown children and two grandchildren. Their youngest son sometimes plays lead in his father's band.

Pride

It's a new world of country music today – and Charley Pride knows that.

"The industry has shortchanged guys like Waylon and George and me, but I'm not complaining," Pride said. "I'm not working for me for air play, but I like what I hear, there are some good songs out right now."

And Pride does have a new album, "My Six Latest, My Six Greatest" and a new single, "For Today," which is being played on TNN. He also has his "Platinum Pride," which is sold on TV through an 800 number.

In addition to that, Pride is opening a theater in Branson, Mo., on June 1. He and Rozene have homes in both Missouri and Texas.

On Thursday, Pride performed at the Home Run Celebrity Derby in Dallas (yes, he still loves baseball) before making the trek to Jackpot for this weekend's shows. He's also been crisscrossing the country ("5 a.m. to midnight nonstop") since Feb. 9 to autography his new autobiography, "Pride: The Charley Pride Story," by Charley Pride and Jim Henderson.

Conductor

So far, during his tenure, he's added classics by Haydn, Tchaikovsky, Mozart, Bach and 20th-century compositions by Stravinsky, Weber, Sessions, Martinu, Tippett, Harbison, Tower and Zwilich.

The Utah Symphony, organized in 1940, now attracts more than 300,000 people to its concerts each year. The orchestra's tours and recordings have earned it international acclaim.

Last year, the symphony performed more than 70 children's concerts.

"We are doing very poorly in the schools with music education," said Silverstein, who gives Salt Lake City the highest marks in the country. "Exposing people to arts at an early age is not considered as important by present-day educators (here) as it is in Europe and Japan."

In fact, before the current season began, stories of the Utah Symphony's financial problems filled the pages of newspapers across the Northwest.

"We are doing very well now," Silverstein said, noting that the group eventually received funding from both individuals and the government. "Our fund-raising is moving along nicely."

Silverstein said the symphony's ticketholders are a fairly youthful bunch. Symphony musicians, who are paid full-time salaries, have an average age somewhere between 38 and 42. That's encouraging, he said.

Whenever an opening occurs, which happens infrequently, Silverstein and a committee of his orchestra members audition musicians from everywhere in the United States and from other countries – behind a screen.

Silverstein, who holds honorary degrees from Tufts University, Boston College, Rhode Island University and the New England Conservatory of Music, takes his music very seriously. He now serves as artistic adviser for both the Florida and the Alabama symphonies.

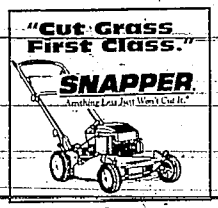

As a conductor and soloist, Silverstein has appeared with more than 100 orchestras in the United States, as well as several in Japan, Israel and Europe. He has won a number of awards in international competitions.

For the last 15 years, home base for the Utah Symphony has been the Abravanel Symphony Hall in downtown Salt Lake. It's a structure that Silverstein described as one of the finest acoustical halls in the world.

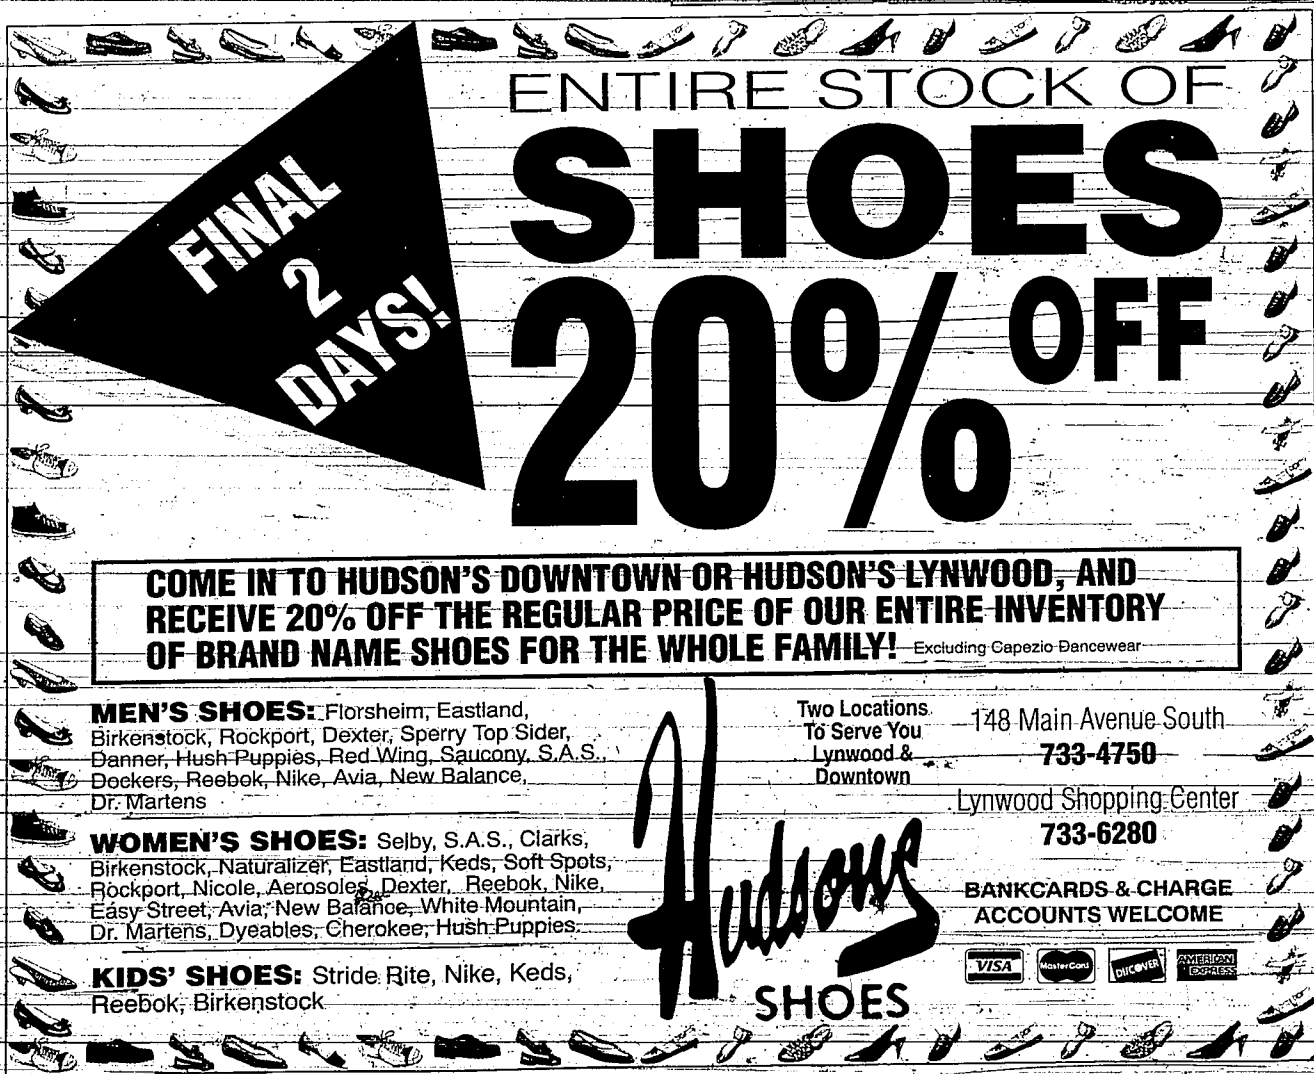

At the Twin Falls concert, Silverstein, 62, will perform a violin solo. Bruno Giuranna, a celebrated Italian musician and guest artist with the symphony, will perform a viola solo.

Music by Mozart and Bartok will be featured.

Silverstein plans to make sure it will be an evening of music at its best.

Los Angeles Times

Concert promoters have seen the future ... and it's a $100 ticket.

Now that Barbra Streisand's fans showed they are willing to pay up to $350 a ticket for choice seats, promoters and managers predict a steady escalation in ticket prices, which for two years have averaged between $20 and $40 in Southern California.

Insiders believe that several superstar acts — especially those with an affluent fan base — could command $250 or more for choice-so-called "golden circle" seats, especially in Southern California and other "glamour" markets.

Yet they see acts as reluctant to go much beyond $100 because they don't want to be seen as gouging their fans.

Indeed, the Eagles announced Wednesday that they'll charge $115 for "golden circle" seats at their upcoming Southern California shows — even though promoters around the country said the band could safely charge significantly more for their much awaited reunion tour.

"Based on what promoters have said, I think we could sell out with a $250 or $500 top in some markets," said Irving Azoff, the group's manager. "But that's not our style.

"The higher figures would set a (standard) for other shows to move up to after us, and I don't want to be responsible for that."

The debate over ticket prices has been intense for years as pop promoters and managers keep seeing higher prices being charged for some sporting, Broadway-type and classical events, as well as seeing hot pop tickets resold by private brokers and scalpers for 10 or more times their face value.

"I have been saying for years that concert tickets are the most underpriced commodity in America," Fred Rosen, president and CEO of Ticketmaster, said after the Streisand sales. "Why else would you have such a proliferation of brokers and scalpers?

"When I advocated the 'golden circle' concept in 1985, everyone was skeptical, but no longer. I think it's now a reality in the concert business."

But Ron Stone, who manages such acts as Bonnie Raitt and Nirvana, branded the expected ticket escalation as "horrifying."

Stone says his acts have been instrumental in establishing the higher priced "golden circle" concept, but as a way to raise funds for various charities.

"It's really unfair," Stone said of prices. "The problem is that there are some people who are willing to pay scalper prices, and now the artists are in the same mentality. In reaction to the scalpers, the artists have decided to become scalpers themselves. That's really abusing your audience."

Because prices were set before the last weekend, the prices for most pop shows this summer will continue in the $20 to $50 range — including such acts as Natalie Cole, Vince Gill and Yes.

Even before the Streisand box office blitz, however, some acts had been testing the market for "golden circle" seats, which generally consist of the front 10 to 25 rows.

Rod Stewart has a top price of $100 for his shows Sunday and Tuesday at the Anaheim Pond. Traffic, the veteran English band that is also mounting a reunion tour this year, is charging $55 for "golden circle" seats for its stop at the Blockbuster Pavilion in Glen Helen, east of Los Angeles, June 16. Top prices for Frank Sinatra's shows Sept. 23 and 24 at the Greek Theatre here are $70.

Fans will clearly pay higher amounts for the right act — as evidenced by reports that the $350 Streisand tickets sold faster than the $250 and $50 seats for shows.

"Those are the most ardent fans," Gary Bongiovanni, editor of the concert business magazine Pollstar, said of "golden circle" patrons. "Those will be the first that sell (at most concerts)."

Not all acts are likely to try to join the $100-a-ticket club. In many cases, the price of tickets is determined by region of the country and style of music. Country and alternative rock acts tend to charge less than mainstream pop and rock stars.

In recent weeks, for instance, Garth Brooks charged $18.75 per ticket in Minneapolis.

April Fools' Day continues tradition

Orlando Sentinel

Break out the "Kick Me" signs. It was 430 years ago today that April Fools' Day got its start.

In the interest of accuracy — often in low supply on this particular day — folklorists say it's just a theory that it all kicked off in 1564. That's when France's King Charles moved the celebration of the new year in his country from spring to winter.

Before that, gifts had been exchanged on April 1, which came at the end of the eight-day new year's celebration. Prankish Frenchmen continued to give gag gifts on April 1, and widened the joke by often playing tricks on the gullible.

As credible as that April Fools' history sounds, the day may have had its roots hundreds, even thousands of years earlier. Spring, with its promise of birth, renewal and life — not to mention warmth and sunshine after a long, cold winter — has always been a time of joy, merriment and, yes, foolishness.

Folklorist Jane Hatch, author of "The American Book of Days," wrote that the custom of fooling people on or about April 1 is both ancient and cross-cultural.

In India, for example, Hindus for more than a thousand years have celebrated spring with a five-day spirited festival called Holi. On Holi's last day, March 31, unsuspecting persons are sent on fools' errands, such as bringing home a quantity of pigeon's milk.

Other antecedents for April Fools' Day include two ancient Roman festivals — Hilaria and Cerealia — celebrated in late March and early April, respectively, and featuring tricks and fools' errands. Even before there was a Roman Empire, Celtics held spring celebrations that some folklorists believe bore resemblance to April Fools'.

Whenever and wherever it started, there's little debate that All Fools' Day, as it is also known, established itself as an annual tradition in much of the world in the 18th century. Without official sanction it has survived. "It's known as 'Cuckoo Day' in Scotland, 'Boob Day' in Spain, 'Fish Day' in France and 'Doll Day' in Japan," wrote folklorists George and Virginia Schaun.

April Fools' Day isn't what it used to be, at least as some observers of popular culture see it. Dennis Hall, who teaches English and popular culture at the University of Louisville, said April Fools' jokes need rigid societal structures to thrive. In today's looser times, there's less need for a day in which there is sanctioned foolishness.

And in a nation where people are either too intimate to want to trick each other or too distant to care, April Fools' jokes don't mean very much, Hall said. Besides, such tricks depend on trust. "In an era where you don't trust people, it's hard for that kind of joke to work."

Nevertheless, April Fools' Day is alive and well among children, as any schoolteacher can attest. In fact, many teachers have gone so far as to plan preemptive strikes on their students.

At Dr. Phillips Elementary School in Orlando, Fla., Friday, several teachers plan to exchange classrooms and insist to their students that nothing is out of the ordinary. At Clay Springs Elementary School in Apopka, Fla., the fifth-grade teachers plan to load up their students with a mountain of homework for their Easter break, waiting until the end of the day to announce, "April Fool."

"Turnabout is fair play. This is our day," said Jody Brown, a fifth-grade teacher at Clay Springs and a 17-year veteran of the classroom. Such April Fools' shenanigans are fun and, she acknowledged, a way for teachers to make sure the kids don't take the initiative.

Children's pranks are pretty modest these days, Brown and other teachers report. Pretending to have not done homework, reporting that someone has been in an accident, whispering to a boy that a certain girl likes him, telling someone her shoes are untied, all punctuated with a shouted "April Fool."

"I don't see many 'kick me' signs anymore," said Joy McGill of Dr. Phillips Elementary School, who has been teaching for 25 years.

Simon Bronner, professor of folklore and American Studies at Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg, said sensitivity training and discouragement of cruel pranks has put something of a dampér on April Fools' Day, but it will survive nonetheless.

"There seems to be some kind of need, developmentally or socially, for some kind of joking relationship" among children. "April Fools' seems to permit that."

Shakespeare tour stops in Ketchum

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

KETCHUM – To tour or not to tour: that is the question. This year, the answer is yes.

The Idaho Shakespeare Festival is coming to Sun Ketchum in September – via its 1994 summer season in Boise. It will be the first time the 18-year-old repertory company has taken to the road to present a fully staged, fully costumed Shakespearian production. On Wednesday, the troupe sent its educational ensemble, "Shakespear-jence," to a press conference/mini-performance at Ketchum Town Square.

Five professional actors performed a condensed version of the Shakespearian comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." While in southern Idaho, the performers also appeared at Twin Falls and Wood River high schools.

Shakespearience is one of only three ongoing programs funded by the Idaho Humanities Council, with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The larger group, known as the Idaho Shakespeare Festival, consists of about 30 cast and crew members who present four plays each summer at their amphitheater along the banks of the Boise River.

In September, the company will present three performances of "As You Like It" at the Best Western Tyrolean Lodge in Ketchum/Sun Valley. The play is a romance set in the magical woods of Arden. It will be performed as part of a week-long Oktoberfest celebration.

It's been a six-year quest trying to bring the Idaho Shakespeare Festival to Sun Valley," Tyrolean Lodge owner Henry Taylor said at Wednesday's press conference.

Oktoberfest, at Taylor's hotel, is entering its seventh season. The event, set for 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sept. 17, at the lodge, 308 S. Third Ave., will feature authentic German entertainment and cuisine, dancing, arts and crafts and German beers and wines. Admission is free.

Festival presents play Sept. 13-15

The Idaho Shakespeare Festival will present "As You Like It" at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 13, 14 and 15 at the Best Western Tyrolean Lodge in Ketchum/Sun Valley.

Seating will be limited, so producers are advising that everyone purchase tickets early.

Tickets, priced at $16.50 a performance, are available through the Tyrolean Lodge, P. O. Box 202, Sun Valley, Idaho 83353. You may also purchase tickets by check or with American Express, VISA or MasterCard. Call 726-5336 for more information.

The 1994 summer season of the Idaho Shakespeare Festival will feature four plays, "Dancing at Lughnasa" by Brian Friel (a 1992 Tony Award winner) and "Julius Caesar," "Much Ado About Nothing" and "As You Like It" all by William Shakespeare.

All performances are at the company's amphitheater in Boise. A four-show package runs $48 for adults and $38 for students (kindergarten through college) or seniors (65 and up). Call 336-9221 for more information.

Rapper's back – and getting Hammered

Chicago Tribune

Rock beat

CHICAGO — Hammer's back, the knives are out, and a review of his new "The Funky Headhunter" (Giant) in the current issue of Vibe magazine draws blood:

"... the word here is 'hooty,' as in, Please, Hammer, don't let the door hit yours on the way out."

Hammer's been fighting such sneering dismissals ever since his 1990 album, "Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em," sold 10 million and made him the most reviled imagemonger in hip-hop. "Too pop." "Not street enough." "A dancer, not a rapper." And blah, blah, blah.

But as a popsicle, "Please" had its moments of mindless pleasure, the kind of hooks that kids, Grandma and Fido could bark and bump along to while doing the dishes. The follow-up, "Too Legit to Quit," eschewed the by-the-numbers Rick James and Prince samples in favor of live funk that intermittently overcame Hammer's wooden rapping.

But its 3.5 million sales was a disappointment, particularly given Capitol Records' massive promotional investment in the project: 12 videos, a four-song tie-in with "The Addams Family" movie and Cecil B. DeMille-size tour, plus a TV commercial shilling for Pepsi, a Saturday morning cartoon and a Mattel Doll.

Soon after, Hammer and Capitol parted ways, and though no one will discuss details of his new deal with Giant Records, it's clear that Hammer has had to scale down his plans for world domination while retooling his image. In place of the bare-chested swami is the East Oakland "O.G.," or "original gangster." How convenient — gangsta rap just happens to be peaking in popularity.

Hammer

Cassandra Mills, a Giant Records executive, explains the new, "rollen-faced, stocking-capped Hammer in terms of marketing strategy: "Youthful, bubblegum rap was very acceptable when rap was still new, but now rap consumers and what they want have changed. ... Hammer was smart enough to know what he needed to do to stay on top. It's not an accident that he's the biggest-selling rap artist in history."

The rapper is still the ebullient, minute-a-minute world's greatest sportsman for all things Hammer as he holds court in a Chicago hotel room. One of the acts in his Roll With It Entertainment production company, DRS, has a major hit, "Gangsta Clean," for his old label. Meanwhile, his "The Funky Headhunter" is about to debut at No. 12 on the pop album chart — not bad for a has-been.

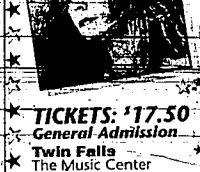

"There's no such thing as overexposure," he says, deflecting criticism that he may have overdone it with the "Too Legit" multimedia campaign. "That's the out card that the press uses when they choose to attack a person. I've never heard them say the Beatles were overexposed. Is Spielberg overexposed? Michael Jordan? I don't think so."

'Joy Luck Club' comes to video stores

The Times-News

New videos this week in Twin Falls stores:

"The Joy Luck Club" (Rated R). Every once in a while a movie comes along that is so stirring and so moving that it stays with you long after it's over.

"The Joy Luck Club" is just such a movie. This is filmmaking at its best: a wonderful story that transcends cultures. It is beautifully set and filmed, superbly acted and masterfully directed.

New videos

Fortunately, this gem of a movie from director Wayne Wang ("Chan Is Missing," "Dim Sum") and writer Amy Tan is now available on video. Wang teamed with Tan to adapt her hugely popular novel of the same name that dominated best-seller lists in 1989.

"The Joy Luck Club" tells the stories of four young Chinese-American women living in San Francisco and the hardships and tragedies their mothers endured before immigrating to the United States.

The tales are loosely knit around June's going-away party in which she is inducted into her mother's mah-jongg circle. June's off to China to see the half-sisters her mother was forced to abandon as she fled the country. The mother, who recently died, never knew the fate of her twin girls after she left them by the side of the road.

June (Ming-Na Wen) has lost her mother, Suyuan (Kieu Chinh), without realizing the hope and love she had for her. It's only through this exercise of venturing into her mother's past that she finally understands the power of her mother's love and her high expectations for the future.

Similarly, the three other women of the mah-jongg club all have some secret from their homeland that has taught them profoundly harsh lessons. And each mother, like all mothers, wants to spare her child the pain she has had to bear.

Lindo (Tsai Chin) is the most outspoken and strong-willed of the women and pits her daughter, Waverly (Tamlyn Tomita), against June. When Waverly, a child chess prodigy, gets her picture on the cover of a magazine, Lindo proudly — and haughtily — walks up the street with the cover clutched to her chest so everyone can see her daughter's fame.

An Mei (Lisa Lu) spent her childhood sticking up for her mother, who was horribly oppressed as a concubine, and becomes her daughter's advocate, too. Rose (Rosalind Chao) is caught in an unhappy marriage and is about to let her husband ruin her life.

Lena (Lauren Tom), the daughter of Ying Ying (France Nuyen), goes through life with a mother who has little emotional reserve left for her. And like the others, Lena is often unaware how desperately her mother wants her life to be better.

The bitterness these women endure might sound like a bleak backdrop. But it's just the opposite. Here's a film that enriches the soul with its enchanting beauty and lyrical tales. It's a haunting story about the redeeming power of hope. (Associated Press) (Video West, Great American Video)

"Dazed and Confused" (Rated R) Being a teen-ager in the '70s was an experience in acute anti-climactic cynicism, a prolonged hangover from the '60s. Deflated and filled with a vague sense of distrust of adults but suffering from lingering apathy, the '70s seemed a time only to live through and endure, not to actually live in and enjoy.

So the fact that Richard Linklater's "Dazed and Confused" — an ode to the '70s — is such a resoundingly uproarious film makes the treat that much richer. And this film is a treat.

Linklater, whose montage of aimless Austin, Texas, eccentrics in "Slacker" became a cult hit, gives us a simple day-in-the-life of a disparate group of teens on the last day of school in 1976 in which the upcoming seniors haze and humiliate next year's freshmen. The boys are paddled harshly and the girls are laid out and sprayed with ketchup, mustard and flour before being taken through a car wash in the back of a truck.

What little plot there is hangs around Randy "Pink" Floyd's moral dilemma over whether to sign a form swearing off drugs so he can play football as the starring quarterback in the following year.

"You need a serious attitude adjustment," the coach bellows at Pink, a line that instantly wins over the audience as Pink's allies. (Associated Press) (Great American Video, Video West)

Barn photograph exhibit coming to Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS – One of Idaho's most endearing legacies is the variety of farm structures that have been a part of the economic structure of the state.

Arthur A. Hart, former director of the Idaho State Historical Society and architectural historian, has photographed nearly a thousand barns in Idaho. These photos have been incorporated into a traveling exhibit that will rotate among seven venues in 1994.

"Idaho Barns: A Vanishing Legacy," an audio-visual program featuring barns from all parts of Idaho, will be presented on the opening night of each exhibit. The traveling road show will appear at the Twin Falls Public Library, 434 Second St. E., through the end of April. The opening program is set for 7 p.m. April 8.

Arts commission solicits apprentice applications

BOISE – The Idaho Commission on the Arts is soliciting applications for its Traditional Arts Apprenticeship Program, which provides grant funds to master/apprentice teams so that a master can teach his or her skill to an apprentice.

Traditional or folk arts are handed down within families, tribes, communities, regions and ethnic, religious groups and occupational groups. A few examples of Idaho's traditional arts are saddle-making, storytelling, quilting, Nez Perce drum-making, basketry, dancing, woodcarving and Basque accordion playing.

The length of an apprenticeship is three to eight months. Grant amounts vary, and funds are used to pay masters for their time spent teaching and needed supplies. Masters and apprentices must apply as a team. Applications must be postmarked by May 16, and funds will be available July 1.

For more information or to apply, contact Debbie Fant or Lynnae Town, Folk Arts Program, Idaho Commission on the Arts, 304 W. State St., Boise, ID 83720; phone 334-2119 or 1-800-278-3863.

The city of Ketchum carries insurance for the program up to $50,000.

Ketchum Public Arts Council members are Dale Bates, Kate Reese, Barbi Reed and Jim and Wendy Jaquet. The council's two objectives are to add interest to the cityscape and to provide exposure for artists. Artists do not have to live in Idaho.

Greatest invention still debated

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Debate goes on over the most valuable human invention since control of fire. Some say agriculture. More insistent voices credit language. The ability of people to talk let humans develop a collective intelligence. I've read about it.

Q. The 15th-century artist Jan Van Eyck became renowned for painting many of his works on heavy wooden paddles. What was the point?

A. He started that after the Duke of Burgundy offered to pay for each of Van Eyck's paintings with its weight in gold.

"No nation is fit to sit in judgment upon any other nation." Such was the judgment of Woodrow Wilson.

Q. If tears for lubrication are different chemically than tears of sadness, I suppose they have different names, don't they?

A. They do. "Basal tears" for lubrication, "reflex tears" of sadness.

Some mice become addicted to nicotine much more quickly than other mice do. It's genetic, researchers say. Certain smokers blame that for their inability to quit smoking.

World's first peach pickers were Chinese.

The original Benjamin Franklin poured a teaspoonful of oil on a large pond. And watched it spread. Then measured how much it covered. About half an acre.

An electric eel can crank out 600 volts — about five times more shocking power than a household outlet.

The United States has no official language.

Q. What was the first infectious disease known to man?

A. Leprosy gets that credit in the medical texts. Why the common cold does not I do not know.

Aussie film industry plays David to Hollywood Goliath

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Try to imagine visiting Paris and being unable to find a French film showing in a local theater, or an Italian film in Rome, or an American film in New York or Los Angeles. Unthinkable.

But weeks, even months have gone by when it's been impossible to find a theater showing an Australian movie in Sydney, the nation's biggest city. It's a sign of the David-and-Goliath struggle that local filmmakers wage against Hollywood even in their homeland.

A film buff could see the latest U.S. releases ("Schindler's List," "Flesh and Bone") and films from Britain, Spain, China, Hong Kong, Taiwan, France, Mexico, Italy, even Chile and Finland.

But you have to look hard to find an Australian film — quite a surprise in the country that produced the world's first full-length feature in 1906, "The Story of the Kelly Gang," and regularly releases films that win critical acclaim.

Yet the local film industry battles on, releasing 24 features last year against more than 200 churned out by the United States. Few of them played more than a couple of weeks, and few were on more than one or two screens in any Australian city. The multiscreen theaters in the suburban malls and downtown are almost exclusively devoted to Hollywood productions.

Paul Hogan
Takes stock in fans

Reel world

Now and then a film breaks through to international success, such as last year's "Strictly Ballroom," and the "Mad Max" and "Crocodile" Dundee" films of the 1980s.

"Crocodile" Dundee," for example, grossed $174 million at the box office in the United States alone in 1986; the 1988 sequel pulled in $109 million in America, the only Australian films to break the golden $100 million-plus mark.

Australians aren't used to big hits. "Strictly Ballroom," the last international success story, grossed $6.5 million in the United States, and $14 million in Australia. That's about how much a popular American film would gross over a three-day holiday weekend.

A more typical Australian success story was "Proof," a 1990 film with a budget of just $720,000 that grossed $1.1 million in Australia and $900,000 internationally.

"It did good business for a film of that size. ... It's not 'Jurassic Park,'" conceded Jack Given, policy adviser for the Australian Film Commission, which provides funds for small-budget and experimental films, and films by new directors.

To be a smash hit, a movie has to play on 1,000 to 2,000 screens worldwide. When "Strictly Ballroom" was released, only 40 prints were sent to theaters; when it became obvious that the film was more successful than anticipated, another 160 prints were made.

Miramax, the distributor of "The Piano," a film set in New Zealand and jointly funded by France, New Zealand and Australia, is rushing 200 new prints to American theaters to capitalize on the movie's eight Academy Award nominations, including best picture, director (New Zealander Jane Campion), actress (Holly Hunter), and supporting actress for 11-year-old Anna Paquin of New Zealand.

AP photo

"The Piano" has earned more than $20 million.

But Australian and New Zealand filmmakers concede they are swimming against the tide, which flows from Hollywood.

"The grim fact is that out of every 100 bucks spent at the box office in Australia, 94 or 95 go back to Los Angeles," said Phillip Adams, a critic and columnist who helped revive the moribund film industry in the early 1970s by urging the government to actively support Australian films.

Indeed, Hollywood has made a bundle out of Australia. Since 1958, 348 films have earned more than $1 million in Australia. Twenty-three were Australian, earning a total of $65.4 million; but 325 American films earned $557.9 million, according to figures compiled by the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Australia.

"We will never be a rival to Hollywood, but I'm very proud of what we have achieved and I think we will continue to grow at the same rate," said John Morris, chief executive of the Australian Film Finance Corp., which partly funds feature films.

"We make a very big dent, considering the fact that we are a very small country interested in making films that we're interested in — the only good films that are ever made are those that arise out of a country's organic culture."

Australian cinema has come a long way in the last few decades. From the 1930s until about 1970, the local film industry was just about dead, crushed by Hollywood and British studios and their distributors.

"Up until the late 1960s, no Australian heard an Australian accent on the screen," Adams recalls. When the local film industry was revived in the early 1970s, "It was extraordinary — we had to teach Australian actors their accent."

The Australian government in 1969 decided to revive the film industry with direct grants for promising projects, and from 1972-78 every state established film corporations to promote local productions.

Investors willing to bet on Hogan's western flick

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Paul Hogan knows that Australians love to gamble, so when he needed financing for his newest film, "Lightning Jack," he let the little guy in on the action by selling stock in it at a dollar a share.

Hogan already is ahead on his gamble; the new company, Lightning Jack Film Trust, raised $25 million late last year and was oversubscribed.

Since then, the price per share on the Australian Stock Exchange has nearly doubled to $1.90.

"Woolworths (food and department stores) is probably a nice steady investment, but I suspect Lightning Jack is a little more exciting," Hogan said when the stock was floated.

Hogan turned to this unprecedented method of financing a film to maximize his potential profits, and to retain financial and artistic control, said Tim Crommelin at Morgan Stockbroking Ltd. in Brisbane, which managed the stock market float.

Since Hogan and his shareholders have taken the financial risk, he can cut better deals for distribution without giving the studios a large share of the profits in exchange for financing.

Morgan Stockbroking is confident that if Lightning Jack opens to a critical and public acclaim, shareholders will be paid their first dividends just a few months later. Future dividends would be paid out of earnings from video rentals and other secondary earnings. The shares become worthless after seven years, but still should be profitable to buy because of the dividends and tax breaks the government offers to investors in the arts.

"I hope it works, because a lot of moms and dads who had faith in Paul Hogan put their money into it," said John Morris, chief executive of the Australian Film Finance Corp., the usual source of funds for feature films.

Shareholders will be able to sell their shares any time during the planned seven-year life of the company, which is publicly listed on the Australian Stock Exchange. However, the value of the shares will probably decline rapidly after the first few years and will be worth nothing when the trust dissolves in the year 2000.

Investors also get a hefty tax deduction; part of Australian government policy to encourage investment in the film industry. An investor who bought a share for $1 last year could have deducted 45 cents on his 1993 taxes and another 45 cents on the 1994 taxes.

"Lightning Jack" is a return to familiar form for Hogan after his last film, "Almost An Angel," bombed at the box office. Hogan basically is playing "Crocodile" Dundee" on a horse in the character of Jack Kane, an Australian who goes to the American West to make a reputation robbing banks.

Film industry insiders gave "Lightning Jack" a nod as one of the Australian films likely to be a big success this year, despite the generally unfavorable reviews it received.

Within the current season, he has pulled an entire series, "NYPD Blue," because it featured nudity, sex and obscene language. Most recently his station preempted an episode of "Roseanne" that dealt with homosexuality.

"I will not suggest to you that my personal beliefs and values don't have an impact, because they do," Neuhardt said in a recent interview. "And I would be very suspicious of any person who claims to the contrary because at that point, I would realize I was dealing with a person who was either A) dishonest or B) amoral."

Not surprisingly, all of this has triggered a local show of hands.

Ever since he pulled the "Roseanne" episode a month ago, the amiable Neuhardt has been vilified as a censorship czar, imposing his own conservative agenda upon eastern Idaho viewers.

His supporters have rallied, proclaiming Neuhardt as a defender of the region's community values.

"I've never lived in a community where someone has done this and managed to pull it off," said Doyle Detroit, who manages Pocatello's public access cable channel. "I can't imagine other communities putting up with this. Harry must have some kind of constituency."

So far, Neuhardt is winning every show of hands that's been held. His own mail is running three "Roseanne." Much the same margin occurred last fall when he pulled "NYPD Blue."

'I've never lived in a community where someone has done this and managed to pull it off, I can't imagine other communities putting up with this. Harry must have some kind of constituency.'

—Doyle Detroit, public access cable manager on KPVI manager Harry Neuhardt

Perhaps most telling is the fact that Neuhardt won a Pocatello City Council election last November in the midst of the controversy. It was an important election for Neuhardt since he already had lost a previous bid in 1991. His decision to cancel "NYPD Blue" could cost votes, Neuhardt's advisers worried.

"We sat him down and discussed it with him and told him his best option was to duck the issue altogether, don't take a position, because you're going to make someone mad on either side of the fence," recalled Jim Eilander of Pocatello, a partner in Pro Campaigns, a public relations firm. "His statement right back to us was, as station manager, he felt like he had to take a position on it. That was his business responsibility."

Neuhardt then went on to raise the issue himself at candidate forums, using it as proof that he was not intimidated by tough calls. He won a five-way race with 33 percent of the vote.

Not all of this is his own doing. KPVI, which feeds programming to sister stations in Jackson, Wyo., and Twin Falls, is owned by former U.S. Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo. A staunch conservative, Armstrong decided to pull the "Roseanne" episode. Dropping "NYPD Blue" was Neuhardt's call.

If anything sets Neuhardt's approach apart, it is a proclivity for prior restraint rather than an inclination to face the music after airing a controversial program.

Neuhardt says the network has forced his hand by not allowing him to edit or delay controversial programs. But no such restrictions apply to syndicated programs, a local station's cash cows.

So how does Neuhardt explain his decision to air the often raunchy "A Current Affair?"

Although "A Current Affair" has come close, Neuhardt said it has never crossed the line, and it remains on KPVI. Syndicators like Fox Broadcasting, which produces "A Current Affair," also are more tolerant of local editing.

Neuhardt said "A Current Affair" segment detailing the use of video technology with sex was tamer than Roseanne Arnold's brief kiss with Idaho native Mariel Hemingway. So he ran the tabloid instead.

"Let's just say the 'Roseanne' episode was more graphic in its presentation, even than was 'A Current Affair,'" Neuhardt said. "'A Current Affair' was talking about the concept. I'm pretty much willing to let people discuss concepts. I just start to worry when it gets to show and tell."

Such antics may have cost Roseanne Arnold her local audience. The numbers that count most ratings show her running third in her time slot in eastern Idaho.

"At least in this part of the country, the truth is she's driven off her audience," Neuhardt said.

Neuhardt's own television taste runs to "Star Trek: The Next Generation," which he airs twice a week, and the new situation comedy, "Grace Under Fire."

A chain-smoking, reformed workaholic — reformed because he now admits it — the 51-year-old Amarillo, Texas, native worked his way up from a radio news reporter to station manager of a Davenport, Iowa, outlet before coming to Pocatello in 1987.

"I wanted the lifestyle that goes with a smaller community," he said. "Everything has a price, including money."

So far, he's surprising some people by showing an independent streak on the Pocatello City Council, applying a magnifying lens to expenditures.

"He's shown a reasonable, logical approach to the issues," Councilman Ed Brown said. "He's been open-minded. And he's never come across, at least to me personally, as an ideologue."

Idaho political historian Randy Stapilus recently wrote that Neuhardt seems poised to run for mayor, eventually.

So far, Neuhardt doesn't sound like he's planning to challenge Mayor Peter Angstadt. Frankly, the job would mean a pay cut, Neuhardt said. That doesn't mean he's ruling out running for higher office someday.

"But at the moment, I just plan to be on the Pocatello City Council," he said.

Capsule reviews

Movies playing this week in the Twin Falls area. Reviews are by the Los Angeles Times and ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America:

"Major League II" (PG). Tom Berenger, Charlie Sheen and others (no Wesley Snipes, alas) return in this sequel that finds the recently triumphant Cleveland Indians back in the doldrums. Director David Wald returns. (Twin Cinema)

"Thumbelina" (G). Animator Don Bluth presents Hans Christian Andersen's classic tale of a bite-sized little dancer born to parents of normal stature. Voices include Charo, Gilbert Gottfried, June Foray and John Hurt. (Twin Cinema)

"The Chase" (PG-13; general release). A no-brainer with Charlie Sheen playing a wrongly-convicted bank robber who spends most of the movie speeding away from the cops, Kristy Swanson (as usual) as the heiress he kidnaps. (Grandview Drive-in)

"D2 The Mighty Ducks" (PG). A disappointing, overly contrived sequel to the impressive and popular 1992 original. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema)

"8 Seconds" (PG-13). Weak-kneed bio-pic about the late great bull-riding champ Lance Frost, played by Luke Perry. Strictly for bull-riding fans. (Twin Cinema, Ace Theatre).

"Greedy" (PG-13). As a satire it's wildly uneven and heavy-handed, but it affords a wonderful major role for Kirk Douglas as wily old scrap metal tycoon whose overly caricatured relatives vie with each other for his favor. (Motor-Vu Drive-in)

"Guarding Tess" (PG-13). The pairing of Shirley MacLaine as a cranky presidential widow and Nicolas Cage as the Secret Service agent in charge of her detail is an inspired one, and director/co-writer Hugh Wilson has the appropriate light touch, but this chamber comedy takes an unexpected turn that undercuts its strengths. (Twin Cinema)

"Mrs. Doubtfire" (PG-13). Robin Williams can't help but be funny in this situation born in high-concept heaven. Divorced dad disguises himself as a nanny to spend more time with his kids. (Grandview Drive-in)

"Monkey Trouble" (PG). Harvey Keitel is the con artist who has taught a darling little simian how to excel as a pickpocket. Thora Birch later adopts the animal, and a wild adventure ensues when Keitel attempts to retrieve his former partner in crime. (Twin Cinema)

"Naked Gun 33⅓: The Final Insult" (PG-13). The third in the "Naked Gun" series is not as funny as the first two but still filled with good gags. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema)

Study: 'NYPD Blue' less racy than sitcoms

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you're looking for a bit of TV titillation, or trying to avoid it, you may be in need of informed guidance.

Despite its reputation, "NYPD Blue" is a veritable bluenose compared with some of the bawdier comedies, according to a new study out of Florida State University.

"NYPD Blue" tends to play nude peekaboo, but a review of 21 hours of broadcast television — including other dramas and sitcoms — found the comedies routinely pack the most profanity and sexual innuendo.

ABC's police drama gets the conservative Rev. Donald Wildmon riled up, but viewers of "NYPD Blue" are likely to come away with little more than creative uses of a few swear words.

(Well, there is the additional satisfaction of seeing a first-rate drama that respects the intelligence of viewers, but let's not start muddying the waters).

Some of those sitcoms, though ... well, pull the blinds and send the kids to bed; this is hot stuff. The comedies studied had, on average, nearly triple the number of sexual references as "NYPD Blue."

Parents, beware: You can't rely on a pre-10 p.m. time slot or laugh track as a barometer of raciness.

Barbara Kaye, a Ph.D. candidate in Florida State's Department of Communication, decided to research the topic after the local ABC affiliate initially refused to broadcast "NYPD Blue."

The comedies studied (by Florida State University) had, on average, nearly triple the number of sexual references as 'NYPD Blue.'

"I wondered if it was really that bad, and about what we're already seeing on TV," Kaye said by phone from Tallahassee. She worked with doctoral student Lucia Fishburne and coauthor Barry Sapolsky, an associate professor.

They studied series which, according to a poll of Florida State students, appeared to have the most sexual content. Programs from the four broadcast networks were taped and scrutinized, including ABC's "Roseanne" and Fox Broadcasting Co.'s "Married with Children."

The researchers randomly selected three episodes of each show; they excluded the first two hours of "NYPD Blue," however, because debut episodes tend to be exaggerated to gain attention, Kaye said.

She acknowledged that the show's initial episode contained a fairly graphic (for television) bedroom scene.

However, the three episodes studied contained no incidents of implied or explicit sex, although there was one shot of rear male nudity and the partial baring of a woman's breast, the researchers found.

But when it came to sexuality in general, such as language or topics, the incidence was nearly three times greater on sitcoms than on "NYPD Blue" — a per-half-hour average of 13.5 on comedies vs. 5 on the police drama.

On an episode of "Roseanne," for example, masturbation was openly discussed after a youngster was caught in the act.

"Can you imagine the Beaver saying that to Eddie? And watching it with your parents?" marveled Kaye, referring to characters on the old "Leave it to Beaver" series.

There were slightly more sexual references on other dramas — an average of 6.1 per half hour compared to "NYPD Blue's" 5. Some, such as Fox's "Melrose Place," were much higher: 13.5 per half hour.

Profanity also was examined, with the scholars creating a tidy chart of 30 offensive terms and gestures divided into curses, blasphemy, profanity and so on.

And darn it, there was the evidence: "NYPD Blue" contained significantly more of such language than other dramas, an average of 6.5 per half hour compared to 2.5.

But share the mouth soap with those comedies, which used more profanity than "NYPD Blue" or the other dramas at an average 7.1 per half hour.

Other sitcoms in the study were "Love & War" and "Wings." The dramas were "Northern Exposure," "L.A. Law," "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman" and one episode of the canceled "Moon Over Miami."

Although the Tallahassee affiliate relented, "NYPD Blue" creator Steven Bochco has said some stations still refuse to air the show — and some advertisers avoid it — in part because of pressure from Wildmon's camp.

area on King Videocable. And because KRTV is listed as a "significantly viewed" station its shows can't be blacked out in the Magic Valley.

That means KRTV and KKVI will be showing many of the same shows on the local cable network, which King Video manager Vince Thompson said doesn't help his cable viewers.

McArthur said he understands that Fox needs to expand into new "dominant market areas." He said the network is negotiating with other southern Idaho stations about becoming Fox stations or signing deals similar to McMahon's.

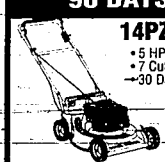

In the meantime, McArthur said he's still complaining "loudly and clearly" to Fox about signing with McMahon.

Meanwhile, across Blue Lakes Boulevard North from McMahon's office is his counterpart KMVT General Manager Lee Wagner. And Wagner said losing NFL games to McMahon isn't that important and he expects to still be able to compete with KKVI's Fox programming.

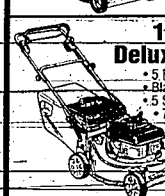

"Certainly the NFL is a prestige product and we would like to have it," Wagner said. But when CBS aired football games it almost filled them with national commercials and gave affiliates only room for about eight 30 second local commercials, he said.

CBS has promised Wagner it will replace football with other sporting events or movies.

Cuban soccer player seeks political asylum

GEORGE TOWN, Cayman Islands — Noel Arguelles, starting goalkeeper of Cuba's national team, on Thursday requested political asylum in the Cayman Islands.

Cal Gallegos, a local resident acting as translator for Arguelles, said the athlete delivered the written request to Cayman immigration officials.

"My motives are political, not economic," Arguelles said Wednesday, claiming he would have been jailed had he remained in Cuba.

Arguelles is considered one of the best players on the Cuban soccer team and some say he's been offered a contract to play in Europe. Cuba is a lightly regarded soccer nation, and withdrew from World Cup qualifying before it began in March 1993.

Indians release Pete Rose Jr. after move from Baltimore

Rose, 24, hit .218 with seven home runs and 30 RBIs for the Indians' Class A Kinston affiliate last year, his fifth minor league season. He tore a ligament in his left knee July 9 and missed the rest of the year, although the injury didn't require surgery.

Cleveland took Rose, a third baseman, from the Baltimore organization in the 1991 major league draft. The Orioles initially chose him in the 13th round of the June 1988 amateur draft.

Rose Jr. hit .253 for Class A Columbus, Ga., in 1992, the only season he played more than 100 games. He has never played above the Class A level.

This fall, preseason NIT comes to women too

RICHMOND, Va. — Starting in November, women's basketball will join the men with a preseason NIT.

A field of 16 was announced Thursday for the first preseason Women's National Invitation Tournament. All games will be played at campus sites, although organizers said they hope eventually to have a permanent location for the semifinals and finals.

The tournament is the work of Triple Crown Sports, a Fort Collins, Colo., company that has staged events such as slowpitch softball tournaments, soccer tournaments, 3-on-3 basketball and 4-on-4 volleyball. This is the group's first venture with college athletics.

Homefield on line as Eagles welcome Ricks

By Mike Miller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS – Region 18 North Division baseball play begins today for College of Southern Idaho when Ricks College visits Frontier Field for a 5 p.m. game.

At stake in divisional games this season is the host designation for the Region 18 tournament.

"We need to find out if all of our hard work is going to get to our goals," said CSI Coach Jim Walker. "Our first goal is to get into the regional tournament, and our second is to host it."

Ricks brings an 8-10 mark into the series, having gone 7-3 after a 1-7 California road trip to start the season.

The Vikings finished second in the division last season to join CSI at regionals, season at Class A Beloit, Wisc., after leading his league in stolen bases and runs scored and finishing fifth in the batting race while at Helena, Mont.

In the only meeting between CSI and the Vikings this season, the Eagles pulled out a 3-2 decision at the Treasure Valley tournament.

The closeness of that score indicates the

"We are a totally different team than we were last season," said Ricks Coach Jerry Schlegelmilch. "Last year we had a lot of speed and some power. This year's team has little speed and not as much power. This year we have a few pitchers who can keep us in the game."

The biggest loss to graduation for Ricks was shortstop Chris McInnes, who will play for the Brewers' organization this

Final Four takes a breather

Florida's Dan Cross gives fan Payton Ellis a souvenir as the team arrives at their Charlotte hotel Thursday. Florida faces Duke in the second NCAA semi-final game Saturday

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — It was the slow day leading to Final Four.

The fans began arriving Thursday, not yet the painted faces certain to populate the Charlotte Coliseum this weekend.

The teams arrive, but there's business to attend to, so all anyone sees are players and coaches waving from baggage carousels or on their way to buses.

Speaking of buses, that's the mode of transportation for one team this year. Duke made the 150-mile trek to Charlotte in a mini-caravan of chartered buses accompanied by an escort from the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

Because there was so little going on Thursday, it was a good day to look for omens. You can start with the buses.

The last team to make its way to the Final Four in a bus was Kansas in 1988. The Jayhawks made the one-hour drive to Kansas City, Mo., then won it all.

The only Final Four held in the state of North Carolina was in 1974 at Greensboro. The team that took it all that year was an in-state group from North Carolina State.

The omens will long be forgotten by Saturday when Arkansas and Arizona meet in the first semifinal with Florida going against Duke in the other. The winners meet Monday night for the national championship, a first for any but Duke, which won it all in 1991 and 1992.

This is the Blue Devils' seventh Final Four appearance in nine years, a figure made even more impressive when you realize no conference had that many representatives in the same period.

"I think we get a lot of respect from a lot of people based on what we did in the past," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "This is this year and we have to focus on this year and what these kids are doing."

Duke (27-5) left the NCAA tournament in uncharacteristic fashion last year, knocked out in the second round by California. The three seniors — Grant Hill, Antonio Lang and Marty Clark — have two championship rings, but this all new to the sophomores and freshmen.

"This team has developed their own personality," Krzyzewski said. "We really had to change in personality and changed our points of emphasis. The way they've picked that up has been very pleasing."

The point of emphasis has become the defense, and Hill — defensive player of the year last season — is the focal point. He did a remarkable job on Purdue's Glenn Robinson in the regional championship game, but it came with a lot of help from Lang and center Cherokee Parks.

The latter has 13 blocked shots in the four NCAA tournament games.

Arizona frontline could prove key

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Arizona probably has the best backcourt in the nation. However, the Wildcats' frontcourt could determine the outcome of their national semifinal against Arkansas on Saturday.

Guards Khalid Reeves and Damon Stoudamire have combined for 47.8 points, 11 rebounds and 8.5 assists per game in the NCAA tournament. And the third backcourt starter, Reggie Geary, is a defensive stopper who held Michigan star Jalen Rose to 12 points this season.

But the two big men in the starting lineup, 6-9 Joseph Blair and 6-7 Ray Owes, may be the key against the Razorbacks, whose powerful frontline features Corliss Williamson, the Southeastern Conference player of the year.

"We know it's going to be a big challenge," Blair said Thursday after the Wildcats arrived at their Final Four hotel. "But we like challenges. Everybody knows we've got a great backcourt, but we'd like to show people that our frontcourt is pretty good, too."

Blair, Owes and 6-10 reserve Kevin Flanagan will have to be very good to con-

Former Cowboy coach upsets cart in Miami

The Associated Press

Shula's contract with the Dolphins expires after the 1994 season, raising the possibility that he'll then be replaced by Johnson.

"It doesn't matter if it bothers me or doesn't bother me," Shula said of the speculation. "It's there. It's something that I'm aware of and I'll deal with."

Johnson, who led the Miami Hurricanes to a national championship in 1987, quit Tuesday as coach of the two-time Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys. He has often expressed a fondness for Miami and almost surely would be interested in coaching the Dolphins.

H. Wayne Huizenga, whose purchase of the team was approved by the NFL last week, declined to comment Thursday on Johnson's availability.

"I've got a year left, and as soon as the sale is completed, we'll sit down and discuss my future after that year," the 64-year-old Shula said. "I haven't made a decision, but I still love coaching."

Until now, Shula has enjoyed perhaps the greatest job security of any coach in a professional sport. Last season, he broke George Halas' NFL record for coaching victories.

"I'll just continue to do the best I can with my responsibilities here," Shula said. "People are entitled to think whatever they want to think. I'm proud of what I've done here, and my job now is to get this team back and win a Super Bowl. That's the goal this year, next year and every year."

Johnson plans a one-year hiatus before returning to coaching. When asked Wednesday on the NBC "Today" show about his interest in the Dolphins, he declined to comment.

Confidentiality agreement threatens baseball season

Exhibition results – D2

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — After two bargaining sessions that contained no bargaining, baseball still appears headed for a midseason strike.

"They see no reason to change," management negotiator Richard Ravitch said Wednesday night after the meeting at an airport hotel, attended by about 50 players. "They like the current system."

Under the current system, players averaged $1,076,089 last season, according to the Major League Baseball Players Association. Owners claim they'll lose millions this year and want a salary cap tied to a revenue sharing plan, but offer no public proof of their losses.

"So far what we've done is have two meetings about when to fire the starting gun," union head Donald Fehr said after the session.

The sides haven't even been able to settle on a confidentiality agreement. Talks resumed March 7 in Tampa, Fla., after a 13½-month break, a period used by Ravitch to forge his revenue-sharing agreement among clubs.

"This was almost identical to what we heard in Florida," Fehr said. "The only advantage of this meeting is that additional players got to hear it directly."

Players are fearful owners might declare they've bargained to impasse, then unilaterally implement a salary cap following this season. Players are considering whether to strike during the second half of the season in order to force an agreement.

Fehr said players are considering introducing their own proposal, something he said they haven't done so far as a courtesy to the owners.

Report eyes Division I-A playoff

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 400-page report is to be released in May that will recommend whether a Division I-A football playoff is feasible.

However, NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey cautioned Thursday that such a timetable may be overly optimistic.

"I can recall in 1979 I said it was inevitable there was going to be one and I suspect it's still inevitable," said Dempsey, speaking at a Final Four news conference. "But I'm not totally confident at this point because in my own mind I have not resolved some of the student-athlete concerns."

Dempsey, the former Arizona administrator who has been at his NCAA post for three months, met two weeks ago with 12 football players from across the country to pick their brains about the pros and cons of a I-A football playoff.

While the I-A champion is determined by two polls, other football divisions have held playoffs for years to determine their national champions.

Most of the 12 players agreed a champion should be decided on the field, but also expressed concerns about the academic calender, erosion of free time and possible compensation.

"They had done their homework and came prepared," Dempsey said. "This was a true indication that we need to listen more to our student-athletes.

Dempsey balked when asked if he believed college athletes should be paid.

"I am not sure it is feasible in a sport to develop some kind of financial compensation that would not cross the board of all student-athletes," Dempsey said. "What I think needs to be studied is to look at the present needy student-athlete fund, liberalize the utilization of that fund and possibly increase it — and in some cases not just for the needy."

He said the NCAA has talked with at least six television networks or cable stations about the potential playoff.

"We found that the television networks that were most interested in a (playoff) were most excited and thought the ratings would be great and the ones that were less interested thought the ratings would be poor," Dempsey said.

How much money a possible national title game could generate wasn't discussed in meeting with TV executives, Dempsey said. It also is still unclear how the bowls would play into the mix.

Dempsey stopped short of saying he favored such a playoff system.

"My style will be to use the committee process," he said.

Meanwhile, Dempsey also set several goals, including:

• Working toward the reduction of legislation that deals with the priorities schools place on their sports programs. "I'm not sure (a level playing field) is reasonable any more," he said. "The price that we paid with voluminous amounts of legislation to attempt to create a level playing field, we have not achieved that and is it worth the amount of legislation that exits?"

• Trying to increase trust. "One of the reasons our book is so thick is because of lack of trust among coaches and the membership."

• Looking at hiring a minority for a new NCAA position that will provide greater emphasis on educational programs and resources for minorities, women and student-athlete issues.

Glavine, Braves blank Mets; Bues triumph

The Associated Press

Luis Rivera's seventh-inning single off Mike Stanton was the Mets' only hit. Stanton pitched two innings, and Mike Hall, Dan Plesac and Don Strange pitched one inning each. The Braves faced just one batter over the minimum.

Tigers 7, Reds 4

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Cecil Fielder had two hits, including his fourth home run of the spring.

Bill Gullickson, pitching in relief of starter Mike Moore, allowed three runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings. Moore was hit on the leg by a grounder during the first inning and left the game. Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said he doubted the injury would force Moore from his opening day start Monday at Boston.

Expos 2, Yankees 1

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Wil Cordero hit a two-run double off Steve Howe in the ninth. Tim Scott pitched a one-hit ninth as the Expos improved to 8-20 this spring.

Angels 11, Cubs 7

Jackson's homer, a three-run drive off Jose Guzman, was his team-leading fifth this spring. He also has a team-high 17 RBIs and a .392 batting average. Guzman was ejected in the fifth by umpire Dale Scott for arguing after he was called for his second balk of the game.

Mark Langston, told before the game that he will be the Angels' opening day starter for the third consecutive year, allowed one hit in five innings — a home run by Sammy Sosa in the fourth.

Twins 3, Red Sox 0

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Kevin Tapani, tuning up for his opening-day start, rebounded from a shaky outing by allowing three hits in six innings as Minnesota beat Boston.

Tapani, scheduled to start Tuesday against California, gave up six runs and 10 hits in his previous start, also against Boston's Frank Viola. This time, Tapani held the Red Sox hitless through 4 1-3 innings.

Tapani (3-0) struck out six and walked two. Viola (1-1) allowed nine runs and eight hits in four innings in his previous outing but gave up only Chuck Knoblauch's single and Rich Becker's walk through 4 2-3 innings. Then David McCarty doubled and scored on Pat Meares' single.

Spurs dominate Cavaliers, 101-85

That's what Cleveland coach Mike Fratello found out Thursday night as Robinson scored 26 points, but four other Spurs were in double figures and Dennis Rodman grabbed 15 rebounds in a 101-85 victory over the Cavaliers.

"They can come at you a lot of different ways," said Fratello, who saw his team's 3-game winning streak snapped. "They're carried by David, and everyone else feeds off of him."

Robinson, who led the Spurs to their fifth consecutive victory, was joined in double figures by Dale Ellis and Negele Knight with 15 points apiece, while Willie Anderson scored 14 and Terry Cummings 12.

"Our bench play is getting better, some of them are really beginning to play very well," Spurs coach John Lucas said. "If they can continue to do that, it will be good for us."

The Spurs, who led 54-49 at halftime, scored the first seven points of the third quarter to lead 61-49 on a basket by Vinny Del Negro with 8:47 left in the period. They increased their advantage to 68-54 on a free throw by Rodman with 4:23 left in the quarter.

Knight took over offensively late in the third quarter by scoring eight consecutive Spurs points, giving them a 78-65 lead going into the fourth period.

Cleveland, which was led by John Williams' 21 points, could get no closer than nine points in the fourth quarter as Robinson had 11 points in the final 12 minutes.

"We had our opportunities to keep this team honed," Williams said. "We were down only five points in the third quarter and we couldn't make a shot. We got behind, and when you dig a hole like that, it's tough to come back."

The Spurs, behind Knight, outscored Cleveland's bench players 36-24. "We just wore them down," Knight said. "They have a lot of guys hurt, so we were able to wear them down. My game becomes consistent the more games I play. I've been healthy and I like the minutes, that's the key."

Bucks 111, Blazers 109

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ken Norman scored a season-high 37 points and had 13 rebounds as the Milwaukee Bucks rallied in the third quarter and then hung on for a 111-109 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers on Thursday night.

The win was just the 10th in 36 home games this season for the Bucks, who went into the game with a better record on the road than at home.

The Trail Blazers lost their third straight game despite a season-high 36 points from Terry Porter and 33 by Clyde Drexler.

Portland led 59-47 at halftime, but Norman personally outscored the Blazers 16-13 in first nine minutes of the third quarter as Milwaukee wiped out the deficit. Norman tied it 72-72 with a rebound basket, then gave the Bucks a 74-72 lead with another field goal.

Drexler, who had six 3-pointers for the game, hit the third of his four 3-pointers of the third period, and Cliff Robinson added a basket as Portland regained the lead at 77-74. But Milwaukee finished the quarter with a 9-3 run, including Norman's basket at the buzzer, to take a 83-80 lead into the final 12 minutes.

Portland got within two four times in the fourth quarter, the last time on Porter's 3-pointer at the buzzer.

Olazabal blisters course

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Despite gusts of more than 20 mph, Spain's Jose Maria Olazabal shot a course-record 9-under-par 63 Thursday to take a four-stroke lead after the opening round of the Freeport-McMoRan Golf Classic.

"I'm surprised," Olazabal said. "I've played here twice before and never broke 70. I guess I was saving up."

Olazabal, starting on the back nine, had birdies on his second, fourth, sixth and seventh holes. "The turning point was on the 16th," he said. "I pushed the shot to the right, close to a bush, then chipped to 80 yards, then chipped it another 80 yards from there for a birdie. After that, I managed to keep the ball in play."

Olazabal tied five more birdies on the front nine to break the course record set by Fuzzy Zoeller and Ben Crenshaw in 1991. "I was one of those days when everything goes nicely for you," he said.

Jordan begins pro baseball career in Double-A

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Michael Jordan will begin his career as a pro baseball player at Double-A Birmingham of the Southern League, where his longest road trip will be a 12-hour bus ride and his meal money will be just $16 a day.

The Chicago White Sox assigned Jordan to the Birmingham Barons on Thursday, and said he will play his first game April 8 at home against the Chattanooga Lookouts.

Before joining the Barons, however, he'll play for the White Sox against the crosstown Cubs in the annual Windy City Classic on April 7. Then, he'll trade in the high-life luxury of the majors for the daily grind of the minors.

"Unfortunately, when you're a first-year player, you only make $850 a month," White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said. "He's not going to be buying many meals now. It will be interesting to see him get on that bus for the first time.

"Right now," Schueler said, "he's just a member of the ballclub. He'll be treated just like any other player."

That means dinner breaks at places like McDonald's, Waffle House and Cracker Barrel. The Barons will spend a lot of nights in Holiday Inns — they used to stay at the Super 8 in Huntsville, Ala., but have changed hotels this season.

The longest road trip for Jordan and the Barons will be to Orlando, about 525 miles and 12 hours on the bus. It's about the same distance to Jacksonville, and maybe 10 hours to Zebulon, N.C., home of the Carolina Mudcats.

While the life may not be glamorous, it's what Jordan and the White Sox wanted. At Triple-A Nashville, he might have been overmatched at the start; at Class A Hickory, N.C., or South Bend, Ind., it might've been too tough to tell how he measured up.

Jordan played for Class A Prince William, Va., on Thursday and went 0-for-4 against Pittsburgh's farm team from Salem, Va. He is 4-for-26 in seven minor league games.

The 31-year-old rookie right fielder was 3-for-20 with four walks and a sacrifice fly in major league exhibitions for the White Sox.

"I'm really looking forward to it, hitting-wise," Jordan said. "The competition will certainly get me prepared so I know where I need to be. Hopefully it is competitive and hopefully I'll respond well to it.

"My main objective," he said, "is to do well as long as I can and let them decide if I'm good enough to move up."

Jordan has indicated he wants to be on Chicago's 40-man roster in September.

"I want to give it a whole year," the three-time NBA MVP said. "I think in a year's time, I can learn more about my skills than in a month or two. I'm giving it a year's time and then I'll take it from there."

Birmingham Manager Terry Francona said having Jordan will make for an interesting situation.

"The whole idea is to not lose sight that he's trying to get to the big leagues," Francona said. "Everybody who goes there is important to the White Sox.

"All I have to do is treat him like another player," Francona said. "I get the on the field stuff. I get to watch him improve."

"I know he's a big-name guy," said Poe, who batted .249 at Class A Sarasota last year. "I knew when Michael Jordan was coming down, someone would miss some at-bats. It's not Michael Jordan I have a problem with. It's the people who made the decision."

Poe wasn't alone.

"There's a lot of guys here, this is their livelihood," said catcher Henry Manning, 25, who also was assigned to Birmingham. "It's their dream to be a pro athlete.

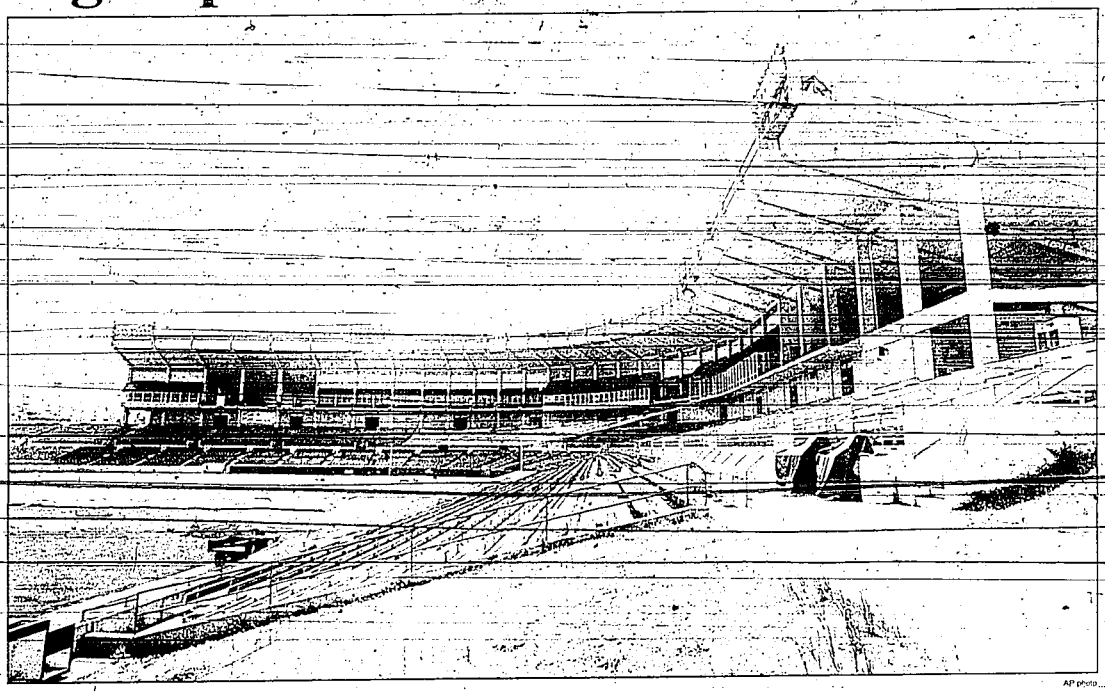

"I'm not saying he's not allowed to be a baseball player," Manning said. "But he's taking somebody's job and that's the bottom line."

The Barons' home field, Hoover Metropolitan Stadium, was built in 1988 and has a major league size clubhouse with 55 locker cubicles. The ballpark seats 10,000 and the Barons averaged about 3,900 last year.

Outfielder Jerry Wolak, 23, assigned to Triple-A Nashville, played for Barons last season.

"Honest to God, I wish Jordan was in Birmingham last year," Wolak said. "We would've been playing in front of 8,000 fans every day.

"I'd love to have him on my team," Wolak said. "Just not playing center field."

"Duke recognizes that they have the opportunity to do something with this team and they are also proud of their tradition," Florida coach Lon Kruger said. "But this Duke team has to perform. Either Duke's team or our team will be better on Saturday, and nothing else matters."

Florida (29-7) is lucky past performance doesn't count because this is the school's first Final Four appearance. Kruger has turned a program as close to bottom as it could get into one that actually has some football fans looking away from spring practice this weekend.

"People are enjoying the success of Florida basketball and our fans are comfortable the team's doing well, competing for the national championship," Kruger said.

Arkansas (29-3) has become known as much for its biggest fan — as far as political clout goes — as for the success that kept the Razorbacks atop the poll for nine weeks this season.

"I'm not on an ego trip. My team's not on an ego trip," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said. "He IS the president and he is a Razorback fan. I don't have a problem with that."

The Razorbacks, who have been in five Final Fours, the last in 1990, create problems all over the court. Arkansas has Corliss Williamson up front and a gaggle of 3-point shooters, including 6-foot-9, 260-pound center Dwight Stewart, who has made nine of 12 from beyond the arc in the four NCAA tournament games.

'Duke recognizes that they have the opportunity to do something with this team and they are also proud of their tradition.'

— Lon Kruger, Florida coach

Arizona had been known for years for its formidable frontlines, but not this year. The Wildcats (29-5) have what is probably the nation's best backcourt in Damon Stoudamire and Khalid Reeves. They combined to average almost 48 points in the NCAAs, with Reeves at 29.3.

"They're really good friends. They've been roommates for three years and they just seem to have a feel for what the other guy is going to do before he does it," said coach Lute Olson, who led Arizona to its only other Final Four appearance in 1988.

"Despite the scoring numbers you never see a situation where someone's open and they don't get the guy the ball. They're very unselfish and yet we need to have them shoot the ball a lot for us."

Leslie's award-winning basketball career at Southern Cal is over and with no pro league for women in this country, she has two choices.

She can play professionally overseas, far from the spotlight of the U.S. media, or she can look for a job. Either way, she'll vanish from the national scene.

Purdue's Glenn Robinson, the most decorated men's player this season, will make millions when he turns pro. Leslie, the career scoring and rebound leader in the Pac-10 Conference, will have to count her salary in thousands.

She doesn't think that's fair.

"I think we are cheated as a gender," said Leslie, selected Thursday as the NCAA Division I player of the year, an award made by Champion sporting goods. "But there is nothing I can really do it about except talk to you, the media, and express my feeling about how unfair it is. "I feel it is unfortunate for all women's basketball players."

Leslie has to look back only to last year to see how quickly women fall from the limelight. Texas Tech's Sheryl Swoopes was the talk of the country after scoring 47 points in the 1993 NCAA championship game. But where is she now?

— Lisa Leslie, Southern Cal player

While Chris Weber and other male college stars from last year now glide across our TV screens in the NBA, Swoopes is back in Texas. She tried playing in Europe, but it didn't work out.

"No one knows what happens to all the great people in our game," Leslie said. "We know as far as being people affiliated with basketball. But overall, our society doesn't. It seems like we're written off."

"If you go into broadcasting, maybe you'll be seen. But that's very few, like three or four out of the millions of women who played basketball. It's very unfortunate, but what can we do about it?"

Fred Williams, Southern Cal's associate coach, said something should be done. Williams doesn't think women should have to get a passport to play pro basketball.

"I think we as women's basketball coaches should try to figure out ways where we can form some kind of pro team, some kind of organization where we can have these young ladies showcase themselves after they finish school," Williams said.

"I think we need that now. I think the women have risen their level of play. A lot of women now, some play by the rim, some of them above the rim. We'd like to see them play pro basketball here in the United States."

Leslie, also the Naismith player of the year, averaged 21.9 points and 12.3 rebounds this season. Her season ended with a 75-66 loss to Louisiana Tech in the Mideast Regional finals — one game short of the Final Four, which will be played in Richmond this weekend.

That's one dream she won't realize. It would have topped anything that has happened this week, including the attention showered on her Thursday.

"I would receive my awards in the mail to play in the Final Four," she said.

Leslie's next goal is the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta and, so far, she has done all the right things to get there. She has played on national teams in the past and was named USA Basketball's Female Athlete of the Year in 1993. This spring, she'll try out for the U.S. team that will play in the World Championships in Australia.

"I feel like being the player of the year for USA Basketball, they won't leave without me," Leslie said. "Unless I was just stinking up the place. And I don't think I'll do that."

Williamson, a 6-7, 245-pound sophomore who has been compared with Charles Barkley and Larry Johnson, is averaging 19.5 points and seven rebounds in the tournament while shooting an amazing 72 percent from the field. Helping him under the boards are 6-8, 260-pound Dwight Stewart and 6-11, 260-pound Darnell Robinson, each averaging about 10 points and four rebounds in the tournament.

But after battling big men like Louisville All-American Clifford Rozier, Oklahoma State star Bryant Reeves and Missouri's Jevon Crudup this season, Blair said he won't be intimidated by anyone. Blair outplayed Rozier and Reeves, and held his own against Crudup.

"His improvement defensively inside has just made such a tremendous difference to us," said Arizona coach Lute Olson.

"Damon and Khalid are great players, but you don't win with just two players," Olson said. "Blair and Owes are a force underneath. They're not two guys who should be taken lightly."

After losing in the first round the previous two years, Arizona (29-5) was taken lightly heading into this year's NCAA tournament. But the Wildcats have put together an impressive run, beating Loyola, Md., Virginia, Louisville and Missouri by an average of 18 points.

"We're happy to be here, but we're not satisfied. We won't be satisfied unless we win the national championship," said Blair, who was wearing a T-shirt that read, "1994 Final Four. We Believe!"

One person who doesn't believe in the Wildcats is President Clinton, who will be rooting for his homestate Razorbacks (29-3).

"I'm really not concerned about that," Olson said. "As long as he's not hitting 3-pointers or blocking shots against us, I don't think he'll be a factor."

Floyd grabs early lead on major Senior stop

PHOENIX (AP) — Raymond Floyd, the only player to win on the regular and senior tours in the same year, opened with a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-stroke lead in The Tradition, the first major on the PGA Senior Tour.

He birdied four-of-the first-six holes during the first round of the 72-hole tournament.

"We're a fourth of the way through," said Floyd, 51. "That's a long way off. We're used to playing three-round tournaments out here. I've got a little bit of a lead after one, that's all."

Gibby Gilbert was a stroke back at 66. His birdie on No. 18 boosted him one shot ahead of Don January, Isao Aoki, Jimmy Powell and Tom Shaw, defending champion of the $850,000 tournament.

Shaw, who set a record last year at 19-under 269 after shooting 67-67 the last two days, carded his third consecutive, 5-under round on the 6,869-yard Cochise Course at Desert Mountain.

Charles Coody, Tom Weiskopf, Dick Hendrickson, Simon Hobday, Dale Douglass, DeWitt Weaver, Tom Wargo, Dave Stockton and Lee Trevino, the 1992 Tradition winner, were three shots behind Floyd. Jack Kieffer, Grahain Marsh and Larry Laoretti were at 69.

Jack Nicklaus, whose 1990 and 1991 victories led PGA commissioner Deane Beaman to designate the Tradition a seniors major, and Don Bies, who won the 1989 inaugural, were part of a seven-player jam at 70.

Floyd made 10-foot birdie putts on the second and third holes, blasted out of a fairway bunker to within 4 feet on No. 5 for his third birdie, and rolled in a 15-foot putt on No. 6 for his fourth.

Another 15-foot putt after a chip which didn't hold dropped him to 5-under after eight holes. Floyd tried to keep his round in perspective at that point.

"It gives you the opportunity, but you try not to think like that," said Floyd, who has won $101,600 on two seniors events this year without being able to count the unofficial $240,000 he won in the Senior Skins Game in January.

Fuller, 32, signed a three-year, $8.4 million contract. He probably will fill the defensive end spot created last month when Pro Bowler Clyde Simmons signed with the Arizona Cardinals, team officials said.

Fuller, a former Houston Oiler and eight-year NFL veteran, started the Pro Bowl in 1991 after leading the AFC with 15 sacks. He posted 10 last season.

"I'm not naive enough to think I can come in here and do it all myself," Fuller said Thursday.

The Eagles, he said, "have assured me they are going to try to bring the best football players they can in here. They're not going to stop with me."

Fuller is the second unrestricted free agent to sign with the Eagles during this off-season. Former Dallas Cowboys kicker Eddie Murray signed on March 22.

Fuller, who earned $1.2 million last season, will receive a signing bonus of $2.25 million and base salaries of $2.05 million, $2.1 million and $2 million.

Eagles coach Rich Kotite said Fuller was "one of the primary guys we were targeting in the free agency market." Kotite said he expects Fuller to help the Eagles' pass rush and become a team leader.

"That's the kind of role I played in Houston," Fuller said. "That's what being an NFL veteran is all about."

Fuller returns to the city where he began his professional career with the Philadelphia Stars of the USFL in 1984. He later played for the Los Angeles Rams and joined Houston in 1986 in a trade that brought the Rams the rights to Jim Everett.

Fuller said he chose the Eagles offer over several others because of the money and the chance to end his career on the East Coast.

"We got together on the compensation. That was the major factor," Fuller said.

Craig Brown
Soft-spoken, out-spoken

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Soft-spoken one minute, outspoken the next, Craig Brown adjusts his personality to fit the needs of the Florida Gators.

Brown's leadership is one of the main reasons his team is in the Final Four. It's not a role, however, that came naturally to him.

"I've walked into the locker room after several wins and said, 'Hey, you guys should feel good about this,'" Florida coach Lon Kruger says. "They'd say, 'We do coach.' You just couldn't see it in their expressions.

"And that's Craig Brown. He absolutely has set a standard here that will mean something to players two decades from now."

Florida won seven games the year before Brown arrived and just 11 during his freshman season. Looking back on his career, he recalls missing two free throws in the closing seconds of a one-point loss to Texas three years ago, and it makes the trio of 3-pointers he made to help clinch the East Regional championship against Boston College that much sweeter.

— Lon Kruger, Florida coach

"I remember those free throws like it was yesterday," Brown said. "And I remember Coach Kruger telling me it would be all right, that things were going to get better. I've never forgotten the confidence he showed in me."

Brown rebounded from the disappointment to develop into one of the best clutch performers in school history. And this season, he accepted the leadership role that Kruger felt was necessary for the Gators to be successful.

Kruger's system stresses teamwork and unselfish play, and the coach says Brown's quiet, yet confident way of doing things provided an easy lead for his teammates to follow.

"Players respect him," the coach said. "They react to his expression and his emotion. I can't imagine anyone doing more for their respective programs than what Craig is doing for this one."

Yet, Brown said it's not a role that was natural for him.

"If it had been, I guess I would have taken it as a sophomore or junior," he did. "I wondered a lot if I could do it, be the kind of leader he thought I needed to be."

One who not only led by example, but one who could sense when he needed to be more vocal and push his teammates.

"I've said a lot of things that I wouldn't want anybody to say to me," Brown said. "But everybody has responded. I'm kind of laid back, but I speak out when I need to.

"And people listen."

"The intangibles were there which we recruited him. Great kid, good worker, very unselfish, very interested in the team," Kruger said.

"But to say I expected him to develop into the leader that he has would be unfair. I don't know that I saw that. But again, it's hard ever to project a guy taking it to the level he's taken it. He's demonstrated security and confidence and an air about being able to get things done, yet with humility."

Arkansas coach travels long road to Final Four

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Now that Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson is buddies with President Clinton, exchanging hugs and all, he may find that a few words to the First Fan are better than a boycott.

Presidential pressure could help Richardson and the Black Coaches Association in the fight against the NCAA over reduced basketball scholarships and higher eligibility standards for athletes. Those moves kill opportunities for hundreds of students a year, three-quarters of them black, Richardson argued in advocating a boycott of games this season.

The boycott was put on hold, and mediation produced an agreement with the NCAA to discuss the black coaches' demands. Richardson, meanwhile, is in the position to take his case straight to the top when the Final Four ends — possibly during a chat at the White House if Arkansas wins the national championship.

And if Richardson is as persuasive as usual, the president just might have the Justice Department or Education Department look into the matter.

He's won games and made friends everywhere he's coached for nearly a quarter of a century, Texas to Oklahoma to Arkansas. High school to Final Four. Quietly breaking barriers along the way. Quietly doing what needed to be done.

Lately, he's not been so quiet. Two trips to the NCAA championships in five years have given him a platform and a responsibility, he feels, to speak out on issues of race and education.

He regretted his silence in 1989 when Georgetown's John Thompson walked off a court to protest the NCAA's move to establish scholarship eligibility standards based on high school grades and standardized tests that many claim are culturally biased against blacks.

Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson talks with reporters as the team arrives at their Charlotte, N.C., hotel Thursday. The Razorbacks face Arizona in the early game Saturday.

"Now that I've done some research, I would have walked right beside him," Richardson said recently. "When I watched John walk out, I felt so bad I didn't know what to do. It bothered me. I apologize today almost every time I see him, for not saying or doing (something). But I wasn't in tune to actually what he was upset about because I wasn't paying attention."

Richardson was paying attention mostly to building a strong basketball program at Arkansas and getting over the death of his 15-year-old daughter from leukemia two years earlier. He didn't go searching for other problems, other issues, but he never forgot the impact racism had on him.

Born in 1941, he grew up in El Paso, Texas, among mostly whites, and Hispanics. He excelled at all sports, though not enough to make folks forget the Jim Crow rules that still permeated the South.

"I was the leading scorer on the basketball team in my hometown and couldn't even go to the movies," he said. "Couldn't go to restaurants. On the road, when I was in high school, I had to sleep across the tracks with the black folks."

He was the only black in his school and couldn't stay with his teammates in hotels. To protest, he wanted to boycott a district tournament when he was 15. His grandmother, who raised him, talked him out of it.

"During this time, I was struggling with myself," he recalled. "She would always say to me, 'Junior, there's going to be some changes in your life and you're going to help those changes take place. But if you give up now, those changes may never take place.'

"She sat me down and gave me a pretty good lesson I will never forget. She said, 'Now what if Jackie Robinson had done what you're going to do? It would have taken a whole lot longer,' She was right."

Richardson went to junior college in Arizona, were he starred in baseball and earned an offer with a $9,000 bonus from the Houston Astros. By that time, though, he was married with children and couldn't see himself rambling around the minors for several years.

Instead, he enrolled in Texas Western (now Texas-El Paso) and switched to basketball because the Miners didn't have a baseball team. He averaged 23 points a game as a sophomore in 1961. He was one of the first blacks to play major college basketball in the South, and he figured he'd set scoring records the next couple of years and maybe carve out a pro career.

Nolan Richardson
Recalling racism

Then along came Don Haskins, a new coach with different ideas about winning. If Richardson wanted to play for Haskins, he was going to learn to play defense. "Coach Haskins turned me from 20 points a game into 10 a game — but he taught me defense," Richardson said. "And that's what I am today: a defensive coach."

Richardson couldn't make it in the NBA, but he had played football in high school and got $500 from the San Diego Chargers to go to tryout camp. He made the team, then busted a hamstring, so he returned to El Paso to teach and help coach at Bowie High School for $4,500 a year. He had three children by then, and the steady job looked good, especially with the prospect of becoming the school's first black head coach someday.

Around that time, though, Richardson divorced. His wife got custody of their daughter, he kept their two sons.

He made one last attempt to play pro ball, this time with the Dallas Chaparrals in the American Basketball Association. But no sooner did he make that team, too, than his hamstring gave out again. He knew his pro dreams were over.

He returned to Bowie and was given the basketball head coaching job. He had small players, but he taught the same defense Haskins had taught him.

Eventually, Richardson built a program that earned him coach of the year honors three times in 10 years and drew attention from college recruiters. He remarried, had another daughter, and worked hard from season to season, basketball to baseball.

Haskins, meanwhile, stunned the nation in 1966 by coaching the first team with an all-black starting lineup to win the NCAA championship. The Miners didn't just beat any team for the title. They beat Kentucky and Adolph Rupp, the winningest college coach in history and an avowed segregationist.

For college basketball, no one will realize what an impact that was, Richardson said. "All of a sudden, everybody needed (black players). I told Don, 'Coach, you don't know, probably don't have no idea, the impact you served for my people. I appreciate you for what you did.'

Richardson wouldn't have been at Arkansas if he hadn't succeeded so spectacularly at Western Texas Junior College for three years and then at Tulsa for five years, where he compiled a 119-37 record. His first year, he took Tulsa to the NIT championship, then got it into the NCAAs three of the next four years. If there had been some bigots who didn't like the idea of a black coach at Tulsa when he arrived, their voices were drowned out by the praise of all those who respected him by the time he left after the 1985 season.

It was strange the way the happiest time of Richardson's life suddenly became the saddest. One day, he was offered the job as head coach at Arkansas, successor to Eddie Sutton, a chance to lead a team with a history of championships in basketball, then right away his daughter, Yvonne, was diagnosed with leukemia.

He made up his mind to turn down the Arkansas job, deciding it was best for Yvonne to stay in Tulsa where she was getting good medical treatment. He told his assistants he wouldn't leave. But Yvonne convinced him to change his mind, telling him he worked too hard for this opportunity. It wouldn't be fair, she said, if he didn't take the job.

Duke Blue Devils reveal bit of inside stuff

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Who needs the Duke media guide?

Maybe the die-hard fans who want to know about every rebound, assist and foul the Blue Devils have grabbed, dished and committed this season prior to the Final Four in Charlotte. That stuff is boring.

For the inside scoop, keep a close eye — and ear — on Tony Lang, one of the three Duke seniors shooting for a third national championship in their collegiate careers. He and his teammates boarded a bus on the Duke campus early this afternoon for the two-hour ride to their headquarters.

Before the team left Thursday for Charlotte, the players spoke during a pep rally at Wallace Wade Stadium in Durham. If the Blue Devils win the national championship, it may have been the last time the team sees the campus before the cleanup begins.

Before they left, Lang gave some details about the Blue Devils that the numbers won't reveal. Take Cherokee Parks, he says. "Cherokee finds a way to make people laugh at the times when you shouldn't laugh," Lang said. "You're trying to be serious on the court or something like that. Cherokee will say something crazy. I think Cherokee's personality has really helped us a lot.

"We know we're not uptight because we just look at Cherokee and we get a laugh."

Parks was not making everyone laugh in the Southeast Regional championship game against Purdue. But he was funny, Lang says.

"The whole game, Cherokee's calling us 'Big Dog,'" he said, referring to the nickname reserved for Purdue All-American Glenn Robinson. "'Let's go Big Dog, yeah, Big Dog.' I think Glenn's getting mad because Cherokee's calling everybody out there Big Dog."

For lip readers, when Parks starts talking in Saturday's semifinal game against Florida, it might be that he's giving his teammates his latest statistics.

"Cherokee keeps a rebound count when we run down court. Tony, I've got that six, seven. You can't catch me," Lang said. "Sometimes, you can't help but laugh."

Grant Hill carries himself quietly, but Lang says he's more outgoing now than when he arrived. "He leads by example," Lang said. "Grant's silly, also, if you know him."

Chris Collins doesn't often hesitate launching 3-pointers, but Lang said stay away if he hits one and his enthusiasm builds. "Chris will tackle you after you make a play," Lang said.

'Cherokee finds a way to make people laugh at the times when you shouldn't laugh. You're trying to be serious on the court or something like that. Cherokee will say something crazy. I think Cherokee's personality has really helped us a lot.'

— Duke's Tony Lang, on teammate Cherokee Parks

Marty Clark has a tattoo of the cartoon character Calvin on his ankle. Lang wants Clark on his side if there's trouble. "If we had a toughest man contest, he'll probably win it," Lang said. "He's willing to say things to people that some people probably won't say."

Reserve Erik Meek has the nickname "Big Smooth."

"Here's a guy who got hit by a car, almost got killed his freshman year," Lang said. "He wants to play so well. Sometimes, Erik gets so excited, I have to calm him down.

"Like the night before a game, Erik will say 'I'm so ready to play.' I say calm down, you've got 24 hours before the game. Calm down!"

Lang also has read the scouting report for Florida. The Gators will face Duke (27-5) in Saturday's second semifinal game. Arizona (29-5) plays Arkansas (29-3) in the opener with the winners meeting for the national championship Monday night.

Lang's big concern, literally, is Florida's 6-foot-7, 290-pound center Dametri Hill. While he's an inch taller, Lang will be at a 70-pound weight disadvantage.

"This guy, Dametri Hill, the big fella. Hopefully, I won't have to push him all game," Lang said. "With Dametri Hill, I may not be able to walk at the end of the season."

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — To find out how North Carolina rose in three years from an Atlantic Coast Conference doormat to a Women's Final Four team, look toward the weight room.

"The improvements we've made in strength really have been a big key for this program," coach Sylvia Hatchell said as her Tar Heels (31-2) prepared for their first-ever Final Four appearance, a date with Purdue (29-4) in Saturday's semifinals at the Richmond Coliseum. The other game matches Louisiana Tech (30-3) and Alabama (26-6).

Hatchell, now in her eighth season at North Carolina, said the Tar Heels' need to get stronger became apparent as she was sitting on the bench during a game in 1991, when her team was on its way to a last-place finish in the ACC. The setting was Cole Field House in College Park, Md., and the opponent was Maryland.

"We were ahead very late, and it looked like we were in position to win," she recalled. "Then they just took control physically. I mean, they just manhandled us over the last few minutes. We ended up losing a game we probably should have won.

"That was when I realized exactly what strength meant at this level."

So she and the North Carolina staff began developing a strength program for the Tar Heels.

While it produced results, they were not immediate and they were not sufficient.

"It was more of the same last year when we lost to Tennessee in the sweet 16. You could really see how essential it is to be physically strong," she said.

Since then, Hatchell has committed herself even more to making her team stronger.

"Now, if I have to, I'll give up a practice on the court to make sure we get our strength work taken care of," she said.

You can see the difference. North Carolina has earned a reputation as a fast, physical team, and the players don't do much to dispel that notion.

Tonya Sanipson is a solid 5-foot-9 senior forward who rides a motorcycle and harbors dreams of becoming a stuntwoman. Junior forward Charlotte Smith got into a fight in the Tar Heels' second-round NCAA tournament victory over Old Dominion and had to sit out North Carolina's third-round game against Vanderbilt.

U.S. economy seen slowing slightly

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy's huge surge at the end of 1993 is not likely to be duplicated this year, economists said in viewing the government's latest figures on growth Thursday.

But analysts do not expect predictions of moderate growth to steady the fear and trembling in the stock market.

The Commerce Department reported that the economy grew at a 7 percent annual rate in the final three months of 1993, down slightly from the government's 7.5 percent estimate a month ago.

Private economists and the Clinton administration expect the GDP, the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States, to rise at about a 3 percent to 4 percent rate for the first half of this year.

"The economy went out of 1993 with a whoosh, with all cylinders firing," said Robert Dederick, chief economist for the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "But in the stock market, strength in the economy is now viewed as a negative."

> 'The economy went out of 1993 with a whoosh...But in the stock market, strength in the economy is now viewed as a negative.'

"The question that keeps coming up is when investors are going to take notice of the good news," said Mark Vitner of First Union Corp. in Charlotte, N.C. "People should be feeling more comfortable. But I don't think it's going to show up in market performance."

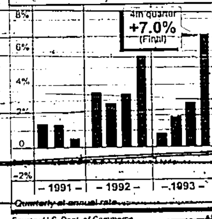

The Commerce Department also reported that corporate profits in the fourth quarter of 1993 rose 8.4 percent to $297.4 billion, up 10.7 percent for the full year. The fourth quarter showing was the best for any three-month period since an 11.9 percent gain in the last quarter of 1992, and the full-year performance is the best since 12.6 percent in 1990.

Also, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing the first time for state unemployment benefits continued to slide last week, dropping by 10,000. The report said a seasonally adjusted 330,000 people filed initial claims, down from 340,000 the previous week.

Building remains strong

The Associated Press

BOISE — Mild weather and strong consumer demand helped Idaho's construction boom continue last month, First Security Corp. economist Kelly Matthews said.

The number of permits issued for single-family homes increased 36.9 percent compared with February 1992, to 471, according to First Security's monthly construction report.

Permits for the first two months of 1993 were up 50.1 percent from the same period last year. But Matthews said the numbers may be artificially high because mild weather in January and February allowed builders to work through typically slow construction months.

Ada and Canyon counties in southwestern Idaho accounted for 342 permits, slightly more than half of the 618 issued for single-family homes, multi-unit residential projects and mobile homes in February.

WASHINGTON — Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.04 percent this week, up from 7.8 percent last week, and the highest in nearly 15 months.

The figure is from a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

This week's level is highest since mortgages averaged 8.04 percent during the week ended Jan. 15, 1993. It is more than 1¼ percentage points above the 25-year low of 6.74 percent last October.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 4.65 percent, up from 4.60 percent last week.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 7.55 percent this week, up from 7.30 percent a week earlier.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE — BOBBY WOLFF

— Edgar Allan Poe

"You'll catch no fools today," exclaimed East as he hopped up with his ace of clubs, and with that misguided play, he gave South a game he was the big favorite to lose.

Declarer won dummy's spade ace, cashed the ace and jack of trumps, and led dummy's singleton club. Seeing the singleton in dummy, East put up his ace quickly, accompanied by some chuckles about April Fools' Day. "How big a fool can I be today?" he laughed.

"Pretty big," thought South, but he said nothing aloud to East. Why spoil East's fun? East had already given South his game and rubber.

The rest was easy. South discarded dummy's low spade on his club king, and the defenders took only three tricks.

What would have happened had East ducked smoothly when dummy led the singleton club? Most probably, South would have gone down. The odds favored his play of the club jack, losing to West's queen and leaving him no escape from losing four tricks.

East had nothing to gain by taking his club ace. The opening lead (fourth best) told him South had a spade loser. Further, because dummy's losing spade could disappear only on a high club, East should have found the brave play of a low club. Had East lost a club trick to a possible K-Q of clubs with South, he would have gained it back in spades, giving him no worse than an even break.

Asner lightens up in family sitcom

By John Crook
TV Data

Ed Asner employs what he drily calls "my Grumbling Style 102" in 'Thunder Alley,' a new sitcom from the producers of 'Home Improvement' now airing Wednesdays on ABC.

Asner plays Gil Jones, a widower and former stock-car driver enjoying life as the owner of the Thunder Alley garage. His peaceful lifestyle is shaken when his divorced daughter, Bobbi (Diane Venora), arrives with her three children (portrayed by Lindsay Felton, Haley Joel Osment and Kelly Vint) and announces they are moving in with him.

Gil is startled, anticipating such an arrangement won't work, but Bobbi agrees to take over some of the less palatable housekeeping and business management chores in exchange for a secure home.

"It's a split-generation battle, in a benign sense," says Asner, last seen playing Markie Post's father in 'Hearts Afire' (currently on hiatus). "Diane tries to discourage me from complaining and moaning, to see it her way: that this is the modern way of raising kids, and sometimes, most of the time, she's right. The rest of the time, I luck out."

Venora, who won the New York Film Critics award for 'Bird,' landed her role with no sitcom experience — virtually the same situation in which a nervous Asner found himself back in 1970, when he was cast as Lou Grant in 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show.' He would go on to win three Emmys for his work on that show. For now, Venora says she is happy just to keep her head above water.

"I'm learning the language of situation comedy. I'm out of my comfort zone. I fire myself every week," she says. "I find that when I wait for a laugh, the laugh (often) doesn't come. It's like that wonderful Lunt and Fontanne story: 'Well, darling, you didn't get a laugh because you didn't ask for a cup of tea, you asked for a laugh.' "

"The director will come to me and say, 'Diane, this is really, really wonderful for Chekhov,'" she laughs, referring to the Russian playwright whose "comedies" frequently end in suicide and/or insanity.

Working with an acknowledged master of comedy like the man she refers to as "Mr. Asner" is exhilarating and humbling at the same time, she adds. "The first time we shot and went out for curtain calls, Mr. Asner said to me, 'It ain't Shakespeare, is it?' And I said, 'No, sir. Shakespeare is easier.'"

Program focusing on Idaho issues to air statewide

COEUR D'ALENE – North Idaho Forum, a weekly TV program broadcast from North Idaho College, will be aired statewide beginning Saturday.

North Idaho Forum is a 30-minute taped show which includes interviews with individuals on a broad range of topics. The program will be broadcast on all five Idaho public television stations, allowing the show to be seen throughout Idaho, as well as portions of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Nevada and Wyoming and British Columbia and Alberta, Canada.

"We decided the show was valuable to begin airing statewide," said Russ Spain, station manager for Idaho Public Television stations KUID and KCDT. "The show includes topics that are universal in nature. It seems like a fitting way to begin tying the state together."

North Idaho Forum will air Saturdays at 3 p.m. Pacific Standard Time and 4 p.m. Mountain Standard Time on KUID (Moscow), KCDT (Coeur d'Alene), KAID (Boise), KIPT (Twin Falls) and KISU (Pocatello).

North Idaho Forum is in its 22nd year of taping and is currently broadcast on public television stations KUID in Moscow and KSPS in Spokane.

Celebrity gossip

Q: Why did Robert Blake drop out of his starring role in a TV movie about mobster John Gotti? Was the actor afraid of gangster threats? —A.I.

A: Funny you should ask. Blake — the 60-year-old actor best known for his riveting performance in the flick "In Cold Blood" — is telling pals that he got "phone calls" from unsavory sorts asking him why he got himself involved in the upcoming CBS TV movie biography of mob boss Gotti. Nonetheless, the actor exited the project apparently because of differences about script interpretations.

Q: What's this about actor-comic Gene Wilder scrapping his career because he's so distraught about the death of his wife? — M.R.

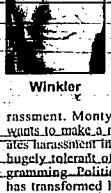

A: Gene's wife, former "Saturday Night Live" comedienne Gilda Radner, died on May 20, 1989. The marriage had been a happy one, and Gene was devastated. For some time, Wilder made public appearances drumming up early-detection measures to better treat the disease — ovarian cancer — that claimed Gilda. But Wilder — born June 11, 1935, as Jerry Silberman in Milwaukee — is forging on. He has remarried, and he's back at work. My NBC sources say that he'll soon be seen on the network in a new sitcom, "Eligible Dentist," pending script rewrites.

Q: We're shocked that likeable Henry Winkler is playing a right-wing fanatic on TV. Does he really believe the stuff he says on the tube? — G.L.

A: Trust me, it's a very skilled act on Winkler's part. The 48-year-old former Fonz on TV's "Happy Days" now plays Monty Richardson, a right-wing talk show host on the new Fox series, "Monty." The real Henry is for the protection of the spotted owl, tolerance of alternative lifestyles, women's rights and opposes sexual harassment. Monty, on the other hand, wants to make a meal of the owl, tolerates harassment in the workplace, and is hugely tolerant of violence in TV programming. Politically correct Winkler has transformed himself into his polar opposite in an entertaining TV series.

Q: How old is Eartha Kitt, and is it true that she was sexually abused as a child? — A. R.

A: Better check out Kitt's new book, "I'm Still Here: Confessions of a Sex Kitten" (Barricade). The title alone is telling. Kitt isn't entirely sure — there was no birth certificate — but she's somewhere in the neighborhood of 65. And she looks terrific, working year round as a cabaret entertainer-actress. Kitt's childhood is a horror story. The child of a white land-owner and a 14-year-old black mother, she says she's never been entirely accepted by either race. Shuttled from home to home as a child, she recalls being subjected to sexual and physical abuse. And Kitt recounted this long before it became the Hollywood fashion to claim child abuse. Once briefly married, Eartha has a grown daughter.

Q: We really like Rosie Perez, the sexy Oscar-nominated actress for her role as an air crash survivor in the recent "Fearless" flick. But why does she dress down so, concealing her curvaceous figure? — B.L.

A: Can't agree that Rosie dresses "down." In the times I have met her, she generally shows her trim lithe figure off to full advantage. Perez recently wowed Windy City fans by turning up at an awards ceremony to receive a Chicago critics' citation. The reason: an elegant but skimpy white evening dress. Brooklyn-born Perez, who manages an all-female band (called 5 a.m.) in her off hours, is an actress who adopts the "if you got it, flaunt it" school of fashion. Can't wait to see what she wears at the Oscar ceremonies.

Perez

Q: How old is Katharine Hepburn, and why does she still insist on taking acting jobs? — H.D.

A: Hepburn will be 85 on her next birthday, Nov. 8. As for why she keeps performing, why don't you ask the same question of George Burns? Hepburn acts because she still gets offers she likes. After announcing her retirement a year or so ago, she signed on for a part in the upcoming CBS-TV flick, "This Can't Be Love." Then Warren Beatty summoned her for a cameo role in his next movie, "Love Affair," She plays Beatty's aunt.

Q: Isn't George Hamilton secretly appalled by his son's recent marriage to TV's Shannen Doherty? — M.R.

A: Hamilton, who turns 55 this year, was initially taken aback when his 19-year-old son Ashley Hamilton married not long ago. But George has since gotten used to the idea. He refers to Shannen as "spirited," much like Hamilton's 80-something mother, who once insisted on breast enhancement surgery when in her 70s. Hamilton also liked the fact that the attention paid his actor-musician son, who had a role in the "Beethoven's 2nd" flick, has also washed over on him. George was recently seen in the TV movie, "Two Fathers: Justice for the Innocent."

Q: Frank Sinatra's latest album, "Duets," was great. Any chance he'll do a repeat? — M.V.

A: I hear he's planning one already and when people ask why, at age 78, he's still working so hard, the answer is that he needs the money because his wife spends so much of it.

Q: You reported some time ago that Jimmy Stewart wasn't well. Has he recovered? — C.K.

A: Not really. His wife of 44 years, Gloria, died of lung cancer on Feb. 16, and Jimmy is understandably in a deep depression. Friends call but Stewart rarely even gets dressed to greet them. To add to the tragedy, the Stewart house was slightly damaged in the earthquake and he and Gloria, in her final days, were besieged by tourists with Beverly Hills maps of stars' homes, who grabbed fallen bricks as souvenirs.

Q: Isn't Ali MacGraw planning legal action if a book her ex-husband is writing comes out, complete with unflattering remarks about their sex life? — A.R.

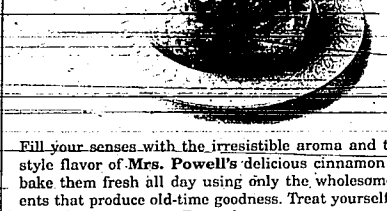

A: Before marrying Steve McQueen, Ali got herself hitched to Robert Evans, a former production whiz kid at Paramount Pictures. That was back when MacGraw, who turns 55 in April, made a big splash as the dying college girl in the 1970 weeper, "Love Story." Evans, a former actor, has been around the block several times since then, and is writing about his ups and downs in a forthcoming autobiography, "The Kid Stays in the Picture." MacGraw and Evans share a grown son, Joshua, and are on good terms. The book treats her pretty well, but is said to be hell-on-wheels regarding studio insiders and assorted Hollywood flora and fauna.

Next month John Castellanos will be celebrating his fifth year as attorney John Silva on the No. 1-rated daytime drama "The Young and the Restless." He honestly does not know where the time has gone. He recalled that he was supposed to be on for a couple of months, originally, but they kept asking him back. Five years later, he is still on the show.

John Castellano
Plays lawyer on 'Y&R'

Soap studs

John N. Goudas

"Silva is generally a moral guy — he's quiet and gentlemanly. Playing a lawyer, I have to deal with the legal stuff and learn the legalese. Many of the soap's main characters have used Silva's services at one time or another and I get to play scenes with them. I learned that actors and actresses on the show have submitted scenes to the Academy for (Daytime) Emmy consideration. Naturally, the storylines involving the necessity of a lawyer are generally powerful scenes and I was pleased to support my fellow actors in those scenes."

John is married to Rhonda Friedman, the coordinating producer of "The Bold and the Beautiful." They are both working so much that the only time they have to vacation is around Christmas when both "Y&R" and "B&B" shut down for the holidays. John and Rhonda like to travel to new countries (mainly in Europe). In preparation, John will always learn a little bit of the languages of the countries they plan to visit.

"I'm pretty good at picking up languages and I've learned it pleases the people when you make an effort to speak their language. Of course, I have a short-term memory when it comes to languages learned on a crash-course basis, and as soon as we come back from our vacation I forget everything I've learned."

John began his acting career on the stage and still has fond memories of his association with The American Conservatory Theatre, The Oregon Shakespearean Theatre and The Berkeley Shakespeare Festival. He has played many of the classic roles (Hamlet and Macbeth), but one of his most memorable theatre experiences occurred when he portrayed Brick in Tennessee Williams' "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" in Oregon.

"I somehow clicked in the role. I found a way of getting into the character which evidently conveyed itself to the audience- both "Y&R" and "B&B" When we would come out for our curtain calls at the end of the play, I would hear something that was so astounding. It was the unmistakable sound of 600 seats going up at one time as the audience comes to its feet for a standing ovation. To an actor, it's one of the most thrilling sounds he's ever likely to hear."

Van Dyke pushes on

A: No question that Van Dyke, 68, is feeling his age. Currently starring in the hit CBS-TV series "Diagnosis Murder," Dick tells me that the weekly-series grind is tough on him. "At my age, I like to be home by 8, not sleeping in a hotel room out of town," he says.

Q: Has Lorenzo Lamas, that sexy bounty hunter hunk on the "Renegade" TV series, managed to patch up his faltering marriage to his pretty co-star? — G.S

A: The news from Lorenzo is not good. That's especially true since his wife, "Renegade" co-star Kathleen Kinmont, is the one formally filing for divorce. Usually, it was the other way around. Lamas, the 35-year-old son of Arlene Dahl and the late Fernando Lamas, walked out on his first wife while she was pregnant (she later miscarried). His second marriage to a publicist, producing two children, went bust. A later relationship with a model produced a child out of wedlock.

Q: Is it true that "Midnight Cowboy," the movie classic starring Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight (which is being re-released to mark its 25th anniversary), had to be drastically cut when it first came out to get changed from an X rating to a more desirable R? — J.P.

A: That rumor has been making the rounds for years. In reality, the original X rating was changed by the MPAA "in light of evolving rating standards and the film's acclaim" — without a single cut necessary. The then-scandalous story of a would-be Texas sex hustler and his bond with a New York derelict was first released with a running time of 113 minutes, and that's exactly what new viewers will see this time around. The only cuts ever made were for various TV airings, with nine minutes deleted to appease local sensibilities.

A: The 19-year-old Drew, one of Hollywood's hottest young actresses, will be making a movie soon titled "Boys on the Side." She'll costar with Whoopi Goldberg and Mary-Louise Parker, who plays a character dying of AIDS. It's all very educational, says Barrymore, who made her screen debut at age 6 in "E.T." and is no stranger to alcohol and substance abuse. Now she says she's straight as an arrow, although she's viewed as a sexpot. Drew, who will soon be seen in a flick titled "Bad Girls," says she's now a movie star — period. So forget those rumors of her succeeding Shannen Doherty on TV's "Beverly Hills, 90210."

Q: Now that much of the smoke has cleared on the Woody Allen-Mia Farrow mess, I wonder whether all her so-called fondness for kids is genuine or merely a form of publicity? — C.O.

A: I'd say that Mia truly loves lots of children around, and that this motherly instinct is totally for real. Recently, Farrow stopped at a Manhattan strip where she noticed a framed photo of the proprietor's family, consisting of a wife and six kids. Mia wanted to know all about his brood. "You know," she said, "I have lots of kids myself," and then began naming all of them. Later the shopkeeper said, "It was amazing in that she spoke of her kids as though I'd never heard of them. I could have ticked off all that information myself."

Allen

Farrow

Q: Recently, I saw a daredevil named Jon Weiss hurled out of a cannon on the David Letterman show. Does Weiss take any precautions or does he just jump in the barrel of the cannon and hope for the best? — N.A.

A: Jon has been shot out of the cannon 3,000 times already, but he still takes enormous precautions before each "human cannonball" flight. Weiss has now come up with an even scarier act, where he's joined by fellow cannonballer James Halliday in a special double-barreled cannon. Their crazy act will debut at the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus this season. According to Weiss, "The stunt feels like being in a car that is hit from behind by another auto going at 65 miles per hour...it's quite a jolt."

Q: I was told that Michael Madsen, who is in "The Getaway" and "Free Willy," was once married to Cher. Is this true? — H.H.

A: It's close, but no cigar. Madsen, who is the brother of actress Virginia Madsen, was briefly married some 10 years ago to Georgeanne LaPiere, Cher's pretty blond sister who appears in those hair-care infomercials with her.

Q: My favorite actor, Dennis Franz, sure has the bang of convincingly playing a police officer in "NYPD Blue." I know he had experience in this kind of role as he appeared on "Hill Street Blues," but has he played other cops? — F.P.

A: Franz, an unlikely heartthrob, although that's just what he's become since the debut of the critically acclaimed "NYPD Blue," could possibly hold the record for number of police officer roles in a career. Thus far, he's appeared in 28 cop roles, including two different characters on "Hill Street Blues."

Q: What's this about actress Julianne Phillips becoming so obsessive about exercise that she has no time for a social life? Is something wrong here? — M.R.

A: Like many Hollywood actresses who are in their 30s, Phillips realizes that her looks — her meal ticket — require a lot of time and attention. Not that those of the 5-foot, 9-inch former model weren't terrific to begin with. But maintenance is hard work. That's why the 34-year-old costar of the NBC series "Sisters" professes to be obsessed about exercise. She stair-climbs, she hikes, she runs — she even boxes — with abandon. She even works out when she's sick. While the results are plain to see, perhaps Julianne should lighten up a bit, or at least cut back on the boxing.
